COUNTER-ATTACKS ENDANGER ENEMY'S WEDGE

Russians Threaten Nazi Flanks

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

MOSCOW, July 9.—(AP)—Germany's mightiest offensive of 1942 has failed thus far to gain any broad foothold east of the great Don River barrier, and Red army counter-attacks from the flanks have endangered the Nazi wedge west of the river, battlefield dispatches reported today.

With massed tanks and an infantry force padded heavily with Rumanians, Hungarians and Slovaks for numerical superiority, the Germans were reported still forcing crossings in small groups in an effort to regain footholds where their earlier bridgeheads were smashed.

Some of these, the Russians said, were wiped out, but others were holding on grimly in the face of intense artillery and machine-gun fire.

NAZIS DIVERT FORCES

Russian dispatches said that as a result of tank-led Russian counter blows which recaptured several communities on the flanks of the Nazi wedge west of the river, the Germans were forced to divert large forces from their drive toward Voronezh.

The Russian counter-attacks apparently centred northwest of Voronezh (perhaps aimed from Orel at Kursk, starting point of the Nazi drive.)

Earlier a Russian withdrawal from Staryi Oskol, 65 miles southwest of Voronezh, had widened the German salient 65 miles southwest of Voronezh.

A huge force was accumulated for the Nazi command's greatest offensive so far in the 1942 campaign, aimed to surge across the Don and cut communications between central and southern Russia.

Dispatches said the situation was serious on the west bank, where some Red Army detachments were forced to retreat anew. The Germans occupied a number of points. But in the relatively narrow sector where the invaders had reached the river they appeared so far to have failed to cross in force.

Nazi numerical superiority was conceded. The Russians estimated earlier that about 200,000 Germans were massed for the offensive.

EXPAND SOUTHWARD

Staryi Oskol lies on the Oskol river 65 miles southwest of Voronezh, a major communications centre on the Moscow-Rostov railway. With the occupation of Staryi Oskol the Germans expanded southward their triangular corridor toward the Don, based on a 160-mile line through Belgorod, Kursk and Orel.

Ottawa Refuses Debate On Drew

OTTAWA, July 9.—(CP)—Dr. H. A. Bruce (Con., Toronto-Parkdale) Thursday moved adjournment of the House of Commons to discuss a matter of urgent public importance—the prosecution of Lt.-Col. George A. Drew under the Defence of Canada Regulations.

Speaker Glen ruled that this matter had already been before the house and he could not accept the motion as dealing with a question of urgent public importance. Dr. Bruce was, therefore, unable to continue.

T. L. Church (Con. Toronto Broadview) tried to question the government on the advisability of dropping the charges against Col. Drew. Ontario Conservative leader, but he was called to order by Speaker Glen and the house resumed routine business.

Pride Of Nazis' Navy Seriously Damaged By Torpedoes

Sister-ship of the huge Nazi battleship Bismarck, sunk by British attack last year, the Admiral Von Tirpitz, above, was seriously damaged when hit by two well-aimed torpedoes from a Russian submarine, Moscow announced last night.

Two Torpedoes Hit Nazi Battleship

MOSCOW, July 9.—(AP)—Two well-aimed torpedoes from a Russian submarine, which seriously damaged the battleship Admiral Von Tirpitz, Germany's newest and mightiest warship, saved an Allied convoy from her attack and let the merchantmen through to Russia intact, Soviet dispatches said today.

These reports said a German naval squadron in which three heavy cruisers and eight destroyers accompanied the Admiral Von Tirpitz, put out from shelter in Norwegian fjords several days ago aiming to intercept a large convoy carrying arms to Russia from Britain and the United States.

But the crippling attack on the Nazi battleship, made by a submarine commanded by Capt. N. Lunin, a hero of the Soviet Union, was said to have disrupted operations and permitted all ships in the convoy to reach the safety of Russian ports.

LIKELY IN NORWAY

Only the barest official information has been issued so far but it is indicated the warship, a potent threat to the Allies' sea lanes, again has sought refuge in an inaccessible fjord along the Norwegian coast.

There the warship and the vessel that accompanied her now are believed exposed to British aerial attacks.

The exact extent of the damage inflicted on the Admiral Von Tirpitz was not disclosed but she was said to have been seriously crippled and was expected to require extensive repairs.

The Soviet press today hailed the damaging of the vessel as a great victory for the Red fleet.

She was surrounded by a protecting ring of destroyers when the two

Edmontonian Makes Sweep Of Grain At Calgary Exhibition

CALGARY, July 9.—(CP)—William Miller of Edmonton, who specializes in good grain and grows it on what amounts to a "back-lot" garden, virtually swept the boards at the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede this year. He won the grand championship for wheat at the last Chicago Agricultural Exposition.

Thursday at Calgary he added to his list of honors by taking first prize for the best half-bushel sample of spring wheat in the novice classes, and then went on to win in the registered and certified classes.

AXIS CRAFT LOST

British Planes Pound Rommel Without Rest

CAIRO, July 9.—(AP)—British fighter-bombers, in day-long assaults despite dust storms, smashed at Axis vehicles and landing grounds in the western desert, following a sharp night raid by ground troops who destroyed a number of German cannon and killed and captured some of the enemy, a communique announced today.

The British planes concentrated particularly in the southern sector some 70-odd miles west of Alexandria, where Field Marshal Erwin Rommel has folded back his line to avoid being outflanked.

An unstated number of Axis planes, refuelling on the landing ground at El Daba, were attacked and eight were shot out of the air during the day's operations.

NO CHANGE IN FRONT

Like the land raid Tuesday night, the aim was to keep the Axis invaders shaken up and deprived of sorely needed rest and reinforcements.

Six planes were lost.

For the last 24 hours no material change has been reported on the 50-mile front curving south and west from the El Alamein area some 70 miles west of Alexandria.

But while the Germans dug in, Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck continues to stab at the enemy flanks, pinching off segments, taking prisoners and destroying tanks. Primarily, he is robbing the foe of the rest he needs before undertaking any new effort to burst through the desert corridor toward the Nile Valley.

A fail of burned-out German trucks on Rommel's land supply route is testimony of British air efforts to prevent reinforcements from reaching him.

Chaloult Case Said Trial Of Free Speech

MONTREAL, July 9—(CP)—Defence counsel Fernand Choquette asked for acquittal Thursday in the cast of Rene Chaloult, saying that "the case is bigger than Chaloult for the privilege of free speech for French Canadians is on trial."

Mr. Choquette said that Mr. Chaloult, charged under defence of Canada regulations, had only tried to fight for the rights of his fellow-countrymen, "like Laurier (the late Sir Wilfred Laurier) and Lapointe (the late Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe) had fought during the First Great War for the rights of the French Canadian minority in Ontario." He did not elaborate on his point.

Mr. Choquette said the trial showed in what measure the right of free speech could be restricted in wartime and if free speech regulations were more strict in Canada than in England and in Quebec than in other provinces of the Dominion.

A request by the defence that Crown Prosecutor Gerald Fauteux speak first was denied by Judge Edouard Archambault as the morning session opened. The ruling was

Newspaper Size Thought Likely To Be Reduced

By B. T. RICHARDSON
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, July 9.—Inquiries under way at present are expected to lead to curtailment of newsprint production in Canada as a war measure, with the probability that Canadian newspapers will be restricted in size before many months are passed.

The demand for newsprint has fallen noticeably in recent weeks, it is reported. Government war supply controllers have undertaken an investigation to determine what proportion of hydro power now consumed by the newsprint industry could be diverted to essential war production such as processing of aluminum, mining and smelting of native base metals and other lines.

MAY BE STREAMLINED

Authorities in close touch with these developments believed that newspapers throughout the North American continent will be streamlined for the duration of the war, by cutting down the number of pages and possibly the size of page, eliminating a substantial amount of features now published, and still leave the newspapers an effective agency of information and publicity. It is likely that this whole subject will be opened up with the newspapers shortly.

Under the permit system for selective service, newspapers are regarded as an occupation closed to men eligible for military service.

The newspapers have recently been added to the list of essential occupations for national war service purposes, so that civilization boards may accept applications for postponement of military service for newspaper employees. This action, recognizing the wartime importance of newspapers, has coincided with raising the draft age to forty years. By chance it has coincided also with prospects that the new economic strategy of curtailing civilian production will cut down newsprint and enforce a reduction in size of newspapers.

STAFFS REDUCED

Most newspaper staffs are sharply reduced as far as men of military eligibility are concerned and a growing shortage of war publicity men, normally drawn from newspaper staffs, is evident in Ottawa.

Curtailment of newsprint production would release resources of power, men and materials that can be transferred directly into war uses efficiently. Newsprint paper is a substantial user of electric power, of logging labor and many materials used in war. Moreover, newsprint capacity, it is understood, can be diverted to other productive uses in filling vital war demands. Men cutting pulp logs, it is pointed out, are exactly the type of heavy labor required in pulp mills and cutting aircraft spruce, in which labor shortages are developing.

Governments Meet Friday On Farm Debt

REGINA, July 9—(CP)—Representatives of the governments of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba will begin Friday a discussion on a feasible solution to one of the West's most serious problems—farm debt adjustment.

The conference will consider the various proposals for implementing the debt adjustment program agreed upon at the first debt adjustment conference for the three provinces called by the Alberta government and held at Saskatoon June 29 and 30.

The two-day conference at Regina this week will deal with the proposals for an act amending the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act and with the suggestion that a Federal-Prov. board be set up to deal with debt adjustment questions, or with the establishing of a land court in the respective provinces.

After the conference the representatives will travel to Ottawa to present to the Federal government the plan which they consider best.

Conscription At Once Plea Eastern Press

By GRANT DEXTER
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, July 9—Reactions to Prime Minister King's speech closing the second reading debate on Bill 80 are two-fold. The anti-government press is critical, but attaches relatively small importance to Mr. King's pledge to return to the commons for a vote of confidence after the decision to impose overseas conscription is made but before it is enforced. Major importance, however, is attached to Mr. King's failure to announce overseas conscription fight away.

It is assumed that Mr. King does not think the war situation sufficiently serious to warrant immediate overseas conscription; that he proposes to wait until the situation gets worse.

The Ottawa Journal, in the leader Thursday morning: "And Mr. King still waits," asks, "What is he waiting for?" "What does he think should happen worse than is happening before he will move?" The Journal says, "Canada does not wait on votes of confidence.

TORONTO ATTACKS

The Globe and Mail, Thursday morning, attacks Mr. King for not imposing conscription, asking Why not necessary now?" The answer, says the Globe and Mail, is that Mr. King places the interests of the Liberal party above the national interest.

The Ottawa Citizen asks "when does the necessity arise?" It argues that conscription is required now.

Only the Montreal Gazette bases criticism on Mr. King's pledges to return to the commons for a vote of confidence. The Gazette is mild in its comment, expressing regret that Mr. King should again have placed himself in leash.

THE REAL CRUX

On Parliament Hill the reaction to Mr. King's speech is quite different. The views of members turn upon the pledge he made to the confidence vite. The policy of the government as to when overseas

Sub Victim

WASHINGTON, July 9.—(AP)—The United States navy announced today that a medium-sized British merchant vessel had been torpedoed and shelled by enemy submarine action in the Atlantic off the northern coast of South America several weeks ago. It said survivors had landed at a Gulf coast port.

LONDON, July 9.—(CP)—British forces occupied the French island of Mayotte in the Mozambique Channel on July 2, without resistance or casualties, the war office announced today.

Mayotte is one of the Comoro Islands. Grand Comoro, Anjouan and Moheili are the other principal islands.

Mayotte, with a population of less than 18,000, and an area of 140 square miles, is an island producing principally rum and perfume.

It is the most strategically situated of the Comoros for control of the Mozambique channel, being about 200 miles west of Madagascar, the northern part of which British forces occupied in May, and about 300 miles east of Portuguese East Africa.

(Dispatches from Portuguese East Africa Tuesday reported the sinking of three neutral or Allied merchant ships in the Mozambique channel and an attack on a fourth by submarines.)

Under Vichy rule, the Comoros all have been attached to the Madagascar government.

Lone U.S. Sub Bags Destroyer Off Aleutians

WASHINGTON, July 9.—(AP)—A lone American submarine, following up the smashing undersea attack on Japanese warships in the Aleutian Islands July 4, was reported yesterday to have torpedoed and probably sunk an enemy destroyer last Sunday in the vicinity of Kiska island.

Announcement of the action was made in a navy communique which noted that this was the fifth enemy destroyer sunk or damaged by United States submarines in the Aleutians area during the two-day period July 4-5.

The Independence Day operation, carried out by at least two submersibles, resulted in the sinking of two destroyers at Kiska and one at Agattu. A third destroyer at Kiska, which is 585 nautical miles west of Dutch Harbor, was left "burning fiercely."

ATTACKED IN FOG

Thus in two days the submarines, pressing home their attack under incessant fog which had hampered aerial bombardment, raised the enemy's shipping losses in his attempts to consolidate his positions on American soil to five sunk, one probably sunk and nine damaged.

The toll of Nipponese ships taken by American submarines in the war to date as reported in navy communiques was raised to 47 sunk, 14 probably sunk and 13 damaged.

Second Front Now Opened By Slav Patriots

By JOHN A. PARRIS

LONDON, July 9. — (BUP) — Dispatches from neutral European sources reported a "real second front" had been established in Yugoslavia by a guerilla campaign that is "in full swing" against the Axis.

(Washington dispatches today reported that Balkan guerilla bands had invaded Italy, clashed with Italian troops and forced the Italians to launch a punitive expedition against them with troops and airplanes.)

The dispatches to London said that rebel warfare was growing in Yugoslavia and that officers who had been co-operating with or not opposing the Nazis in the past were now joining up every day with the guerillas of Gen. Draja Mihailovitch.

A Yugoslav diplomat said that the operations were "a real second front" against the Axis. It was reported that the rebels had captured the town of Ojalin, with about 2,000 inhabitants, not far from Zagreb.

Other reports from occupied Europe said that a German army regiment at Brussels had been dynamited by Belgian anti-Nazis with a number of casualties. The city of Brussels was fined 2,000,000 Belgian francs.

Chinese Trap 30,000 Japs In Kiangsi Move

CHUNGKING, July 9.—(AP)—The Chinese Central News Agency reported that the Chinese had achieved a smashing comeback in central Kiangsi province, trapping 30,000 Japanese troops, killing or wounding 2,000 and capturing large quantities of material.

In eastern Kiangsi the Chinese reoccupied the important highway town of Nanfeng and Ihwang, the agency said.

A Chinese communique said only that the Japanese were checked at several points in central Kiangsi province and that 1,000 casualties were inflicted on the enemy in a fight that began two days ago and was still in progress.

A Chinese spokesman had said earlier that the Japanese were using 30,000 soldiers in attempts to encircle large Chinese forces, but that these efforts had failed, with the Chinese withdrawing according to ward.

Meanwhile, it was announced today that United States bombers attacked Hankow three days ago. Hankow also was attacked July 2.

A communique from United States headquarters also reported that several Japanese planes were destroyed on the ground in a raid on the While Cloud airdrome July 4 near Canton.

R.C.A.F. Drops 'Specials' On Great Naval Base

By ALLAN NICKLESON

LONDON, July 9.—(CP)—R. C. A. F. squadrons, including some Wellingtons carrying "extra special" bomb loads, aided the R.A.F. in last night's pounding of much-bombed Wilhelmshaven naval base.

Returning crews reported they were able to see growing circles of incandescent flames and dazzling flashes of high explosives after dropping their bomb loads.

The R.C.A.F. said at least two Canadian squadrons participated in the night's operations and it was believed another also took part. Halifaxes and Wellingtons made up the all-Canadian formations while numerous other Canucks flew with R.A.F. units.

There was no specific mention of the total number of planes involved but the raid was described as "heavy." Only four planes were lost in this first attack on Germany since July 2.

The trip was a farewell operation for some time for several Canadians, who will leave before joining the new French-Canadian squadron. Among them was Fit. Lieut. Laurence Swanson, D.F.M., Edmonton.

Fighter command aircraft at the same time attacked enemy airdromes and other objectives in occupied France. The air ministry said they intercepted and destroyed two German bombers.

The raid on Germany followed five nights of bad weather.

In offensive-defensive operations two German bombers were reported destroyed by British "intruder" pilots over German-occupied territory during the night.

TO MEET CRITICAL MATERIAL PROBLEM

U. S. War Production Board Reorganized, Speed Output

Position Of Canada On Priorities Is Believed Unchanged By New Setup

By J. F. SANDERSON

WASHINGTON, July 9.—(CP)—A reorganization of the War Production Board, emphasizing its control over priorities and the flow of raw materials, was announced yesterday by Chairman Donald M. Nelson.

It is designed to deal with the latest phase of the American production problem, the control and distribution of critical materials, many of which are becoming scarce and involved, in some respects, a fight between the war pfoduction board and the service departments for over-all direction of wartime production.

Canadian officials in Washington have been watching closely the day-to-day developments in the W.P.B. reorganization, particularly in relation to priorities, because any major change in policy might have had far-reaching, perhaps even disastrous effects on Canada's war-tine production machine.

POSITION UNCHANGED

The prevailing opinion last night was that Canada's priority position in the distribution of raw materials and processed goods has not been changed by any appreciable degree.

One result of the reorganization will be to bring W.P.B. in closer relationship with the strategic direction of the war, not only through the American service departments but through the combined production and resources board of the United States and Britain, the new agency to correlate the wartime purchases of the two nations, and, indirectly, of Canada.

In announcing the reorganization, Nelson said that supply of raw materials is the only limiting factor on American war-time production. It will continue to be the task of the military authorities to set production urgencies—to decide the order in which tanks, ships, planes or anything else is required—but it will be the responsibility of W.P.B. to fit that program to the raw materials position, to determine the extent to which there are sufficient raw materials to supply the requirements of the military authorities.

The objective of converting big industries from the manufacture of automobiles and other civilian items to the making of planes and other military essentials has been accomplished, he said.

NEW PHASE AHEAD

Now, he said, a new phase lies ahead, one of controlling production by directing the flow of the limited supply of raw materials into the making of the things which the army and navy commanders urgently need, with a simultaneous regard for producing also the things the civilian economy needs.

To supervise the new production phase, Nelson created four new offices between himself and the operating divisions, charged with the handle details of administration which he has attended to personally in the past. The four will be free to decide matters of policy, visit key production areas, and possibly make trips to Britain.

DEPUTY APPOINTED

He named William L. Batt vice-chairman of the board to serve as his assistant and deputy, and to help him in the determination of policies and the direction of operations. Batt had been serving as chairman of the committee of requirements.

He also created a new post, vice-chairman of program determination, to direct the already functioning divisions dealing with that subject. To the job he named James S. Knowlson, formerly director of industry operations.

A third new office he announced as a director general for operations, under Armory Houghton, formerly deputy chief of the bureau of industry branches. All operating and work including the industry and material branches and the field organization will head up to Houghton.

He also created but left unfilled for the moment a fourth post, deputy chairman on program progress, who will have charge of W.P.B.'s statistical services, which keep tab and reports on output.

Sees War's End In 1942 Or 1943

WASHINGTON, July 9.—(AP)—Predicting the war will end "probably in 1942 and unquestionably in 1943," Chairman Andrew May of the House of Representatives Military Affairs Committee said today there will be no need for the United States army to induct married men or youths in the 18 and 19 year group.

The information on which he based the prediction, he told reporters, was "a military secret," obtained since the recent Russian reverses.

Best estimates based on the recent registration of 18 and 19 year old boys, May said, shows there are approximately 2,125,000 in this group.

May expressed the view an army of 8,000,000 is all the country needs.

Chaloult Case Said Trial Of Free Speech

given with Mr. Choquette protesting that in summary conviction trials the crown "is supposed to argue first."

DEFINES FREEDOM

Mr. Choquette said that newspaper reports of Mr. Chaloult's May 19 speech had been incomplete and submitted that they did not establish that article 39 of the Defence of Canada Regulations had been violated. He added that "freedom of speech does not mean that one is allowed to preach uprising and assassination, but allowed one to warn the government of the inevitable aftermath of a measure one is combatting."

He claimed for his client the right to oppose any measure introduced before parliament and the right to use any argument before it is passed.

WOULD BAR HISTORY

Mr. Choquette said that were article 39 strictly enforced, "it would be impossible to teach the history of Canada in Canadian schools, as recounting the victories of Montcalm would irk the English students, and the description of Wolfe's feats would create animosity among the French students."

"However paradoxical as it may seem," Mr. Choquette said, "French Canadians are just as determined as ever to fight as they are irreducible in their fight against conscription for overseas." He added they were opposed to compulsory military participation.

FEAR DOMINATION

"French Canadians," he said, "see an attempt at domination in the imposition of conscription by a majority."

Mr. Choquette held that the accused had a right to make a speech opposing conscription at a meeting "organized by an anti-conscription group and attended by two members of parliament" (Maxime Raymond and Jean-Francois Pouliot).

The defence counsel said the crown had to consider that a full text of the accused's speech was not available. He quoted a French author as saying: "Give me two words of a person and I'll have him hanged."

Philippe Monette, counsel for defence counsel, said that Canada was no longer a "colony" and that "no-thing the statutes of Westminster prevented a Canadian citizen from claiming his rights."

Some of the main points are:

1—Deductions from the pay envelopes of employees making the source will start with the first payday in September.

2—Deductions over the year until Aug. 31, 1943, will cover the entire portion of the income tax of the employee that is kept by the government and approximately one-third of the portion which is refundable after the war;

3—The employee must file his tax return by Sept. 30;

4—The employer must file a statement of salaries and wages of his employees by Oct. 15;

5—The employer must tell his employee what return he is making concerning that particular employee early in September, so that the employer and employee returns will conform.

6—An employer must make a return on each employee whose salary or wage is three-quarters of such employee's total income.

The new tax rates are retroactive to Jan. 1 last. The payments beginning in September continue until the end of August, meaning that the tax on 1942 income is not paid in full until that time.

NOT FULL DEDUCTION

The most important feature of the announcement is that deductions from pay envelopes include approximately one-third of the refundable portion of the tax, and not the full amount.

The budget provides that taxpayers may offset the refundable or compulsory saving portion of the tax by deducting payments on life insurance premiums, superannuation funds premiums, payments on principal or mortgages.

The fear among taxpayers across Canada, as shown by letters flowing in to C. Fraser Elliott, commissioner of income tax, has been that the full amount of the refundable portion of the income tax would be deducted at the source and the taxpayer would not get a rebate until adjustments were made a year or so later. Meantime the insurance premiums and payments on the mortgages would have to be met.

Such a procedure would have placed many taxpayers in great difficulty to provide the ready money until they got the rebate.

HOW IT WORKS OUT

The national revenue department has decided on requiring the employers to deduct approximately one-third of the refundable portion of the tax and the balance will be adjusted between the taxpayer and the income tax office after deduction of the insurance premiums, superannuation and mortgage principal payments.

For example, if the refundable portion of income tax is $300, the employer will deduct over this year $100 of this portion and the employee will look after the remaining portion.

If the taxpayer pays more than $200 in life insurance premiums, superannuation and principal payments on mortgage he will be entitled to a refund from the income tax office but if he pays less he will have to pay the difference.

As the refundable feature of the income tax is really compulsory savings, the one-third deduction was arrived at in the belief that the average wage-earner already is paying in his insurance and mortgage payments two-thirds of what the budget expects him to save.

At the conferences with Mr. Elliott and his staff were representatives of the railway companies, Canadian manufacturers' association, chambers of commerce and a considerable list of larger employers.

Commission Will Study Shipyards

OTTAWA, July 9. — (CP) — Mr. Justice S. E. Richards of the Manitoba Court of Appeal has been appointed chairman of a royal commission to study the British Columbia shipyards situation, it was learned unofficially today.

It was understood that the commission, when it is finally established, will consist of five or seven members, and that technical advisers probably will be named as well.

Mr. Justice Richards now is in Ottawa.

Labor difficulties have occurred recently at the coast yards, subsequent to advancement by Labor Minister Mitchell of a proposal for seven-day operation, under a system of staggered shifts by which no man would work more than six days a week.

Representatives of coast shipyard unions recently conferred with the labor minister and departmental officials here, suggesting an alternative plan for a six-day week. At the conferences, however, they agreed to a 30-day trial of the seven-day proposal, during which period the labor department was to make a thorough study of the alternative plan and of the situation at the coast.

Several days ago it was suggested unofficially the government might decide on a commission inquiry rather than have a survey made by departmental officials. It was said some persons in labor circles feel that government investigators might possibly be prejudiced in favor of the seven-day plan since it had been proposed by the labor minister.

Two of the missing passengers were Trinidad women, and others all were residents of St. Vincent.

Conscription At Once Plea Eastern Press

conscription is necessary is thoroughly understood. It is recognized that "necessity" in this regard has no relation to the position of the war. Conscription for overseas will become necessary when recruiting fails to fill the requirements of the army.

It is surprising but true that Mr. King's pledge is disliked with varying degrees of intensity by a substantial number of English-speaking Liberal members. But substantial is meant perhaps forty or fifty of them.

It is also unwelcome to perhaps six or seven members of the cabinet—again in varying degrees of intensity. It is now clear that the general expectation in the main had been that Mr. King's emphatic statements against two debates ruled out any return to parliament in advance of enforcement.

The new pledge, therefore, came as a surprise to most of the members and several of the ministers, and by many it was disliked or resented.

REVOLT BREWED

For a time on Tuesday night, after the speech, something like a revolt seemed possible, but reflection appears to have convinced the discontented that it is really no more than a point of procedure. The feeling, however, remains and undoubtedly adds to the accumulation of grievances which, at some future time, may bring serious trouble.

Among the parties, the Conservatives have adopted an attitude of wounded innocence. They complain that if they had thought that the government did not mean immediate application, they would not have supported the bill.

The C.C.F. stands in a different position. In the course of the debate, the C.C.F.'s angled vigorously for political advantage in every direction. The amendments were moved and thrown out. The first opposed the bill because conscription of man-power took precedence over wealth, industry and financial institutions.

Mr. King destroyed this argument by pointing out that the statute which the bill amends already provides for the conscription of man-power and takes precedence over wealth, industry and financial institutions.

Mr. King destroyed this argument by pointing out that the statute which the bill amends already provides for the conscription of man-power and takes precedence over wealth, industry and financial institutions.

WORTH NOTING

It is notable that this amendment was advanced at about the same time as Liberal anti-conscriptionists in Quebec were advancing this argument obviously in the hope of preventing the enactment of conscription. It was recognized in the commons that the C.C.F. effort to gain support for the Socialists in Quebec at the expense of the Liberal party. Still later a second amendment was moved calling on the government to inform the house fully of plans for imposing conscription in advance of the act. This, again was a delaying action which might be well calculated to attract sympathy in Quebec.

Apparently the C.C.F. realized that there were dangers in a too brazen wooing of French Canada because at the end of the debate M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, made a speech strongly advocating early conscription. This speech, was addressed to the conscriptionist elements in the country. It is true to say, therefore, that the debate revealed the weakness of the anti-C.C.F. strategy as well as an irresistable impulse to cash in politically on the conscription issue. The results are not yet apparent.

BREAK NOT EXPECTED

As for the Quebec members, there is good reason to believe that the vote does not mean a break in the party ranks in Quebec. The modern, French-Canadian members, at the end of the debate, did not even feel it necessary to move a counter-amendment in the shape of the Roy-Conservative Nationalist, of Gaspe. They refused to vote for the Roy amendment and as a result Mr. Roy could not summon sufficient strength to obtain a recorded division. Thereafter the moderates, with a few exceptions, voted against the bill, but it has since become known that they took pains to be certain that the government would have a handsome majority before they committed themselves by ballot to opposition. It is also significant to notable that the voting was not accompanied by any emotional outbursts. The division might well have been on a normal motion to go into supply.

At the last moment, one French Canadian Liberal switched from opposition to support of the Bill. With one vacant seat, Quebec has 64 votes. Forty six were cast against Bill. 11 for and the other 7 were paired against the Bill. Dr. Rodolphe Leduc of Wright switched from opposition to support, although his constituency had voted no in the plebiscite.

Continue Probing Murray Expenses

OTTAWA, July 9—(CP)—E. E. Mr. Pickering said Mr. Murray also had claimed expenses for five days absence from Ottawa in western Canada. He said that because of other engagements Mr. Murray had at that time said he would have had to make two separate flights to the west within a period of a few days to qualify for the five days' absence.

His evidence on expense accounts was given at the request of Hon. M. Coldwell, C.C.F. house leader. In earlier testimony Mr. Pickering outlined circumstances of his resignation from the CBC.

F.B.I. Rounds Up 84 More Nazi Agents

NEW YORK, July 9.—(AP)—Fast-moving Federal Bureau of Investigation agents bent on wiping out the German-American Bund rounded up 84 additional members in the metropolitan area last night for a total of 113 bundist arrests throughout the United States in two days.

The new prisoners were seized as dangerous enemy aliens and were removed to Ellis Island to await hearings by alien enemy boards that could result in internment for the war duration.

HELD IN HIGH BAIL

Meanwhile some of the original 29 indicted Tuesday on charges ranging from espionage to evasion of the selective service and alien registration acts were arraigned and held in bail as high as $50,000. Pleas of not guilty were entered by all but one of those heard yesterday.

Among those pleading not guilty is Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, former national bund leader, captured in Mexico and now held at Hartford, Conn., under $50,000 bail on a charge of espionage. Also held at Hartford in $7,500 bail is Wilbur V. Keegan, former bund counsel who had offices at Hoboken, N.J.

The indictments against Keegan and 25 of the 28 others arrested Tuesday charge conspiracy to evade the Selective Service Act, conspiracy to counsel bund members to resist service in the United States armed forces or conspiracy to conceal bund membership in registering as aliens. In the case of Kunze, espionage also is charged.

Allies May Duplicate Hitler's Tactics For Offensive

Smashing Of Japan Fleet, Softening Process Before Europe Invasion Possible

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., July 9—(AP)—An over-all strategy of defeating Japan by forcing its main fleet into action and conquering Germany through an eventual invasion of continental Europe was outlined as a promising possibility yesterday by Brig. G. K. Bourne of the British joint staff mission in Washington.

The highly-placed staff officer outlined the considerations confronting the United Nations war planners in an address prepared for the University of Virginia's institute of public affairs but carefully refrained, for military reasons, from defining any specific course of future action which may have been adopted thus far.

The Japanese fleet, he observed, can always avoid the ultimate battle until Allied bombers are based within operating distances of it.

NEVER ATTEMPTED

He said a "permanent invasion" of the European continent had never been attempted and noted that even at the height of his power, after the fall of France, Hitler refrained from the "uncalculated risks" involved in an invasion of the British Isles.

It might develop, he said, that the Allied methods of attack would have to conform to the principles of Hitler himself.

"In other words," he added, "we may be right in not plunging ahead into an uncalculated risk but rather beat Hitler at his own game in the preliminary phase; by softening process, by continued blockade, by increasingly intense British and American bombing, by the threat of invasion and by raids on the model of Cherbourg, and more recently St. Nazaire.

SHATTER PRECEDENT

"This process, together with the rising temper of the occupied countries, will enable us to achieve what has never been done, or even attempted, before."

Turning to the Pacific, he said Japan had the advantage of fighting on interior lines.

But Japan is vulnerable, nevertheless, he said, and in the last analysis depends upon her fleet for protection, as does England. The question then was one of forcing the main Japanese fleet into action, and not one of surface actions between battle squadrons.

"The increasing effectiveness of air bombing attack and particularly of its long range power is the most promising factor for a reasonably quick decision in the Pacific war," he said.

Leaders Pledge Restoration Of French Freedom

NEW YORK, July 9—(CP)—Wendell L. Willkie and Gen. Charles De Gaulle last night opened "Free French Week" in an international ceremony in which both pledged their people to fight for victory and reconstruction of the world when victory is won.

Willkie in a speech heard on both long and short wave radio bands declared: " . . . It is impossible to conceive of a world without a free, flourishing France, a France that will continue to yield to mankind, out of the resources and imagination of her people, her great contributions in the arts and sciences in philosophy and literature, in custom and feeling and in the cultural progress that attends the forward movement of civilization.

MUST BE FREE

"There must be a free France. The people of the United States are dedicated to its restoration."

The audience at newly-opened Freedom House heard De Gaulle reply from London that the Allies "meant to win the war and the peace."

"To win the war it is not enough to have soldiers and armaments," the general said. "Men and material must have a well-chosen objective and clever leadership to inspire the necessary confidence and enthusiasm. It is the spirit and courage that win victories."

"To win the peace," he continued, "it would not be enough to command gigantic resources. It would not be enough to impose severe conditions on the aggressor nations for universal security, it would not be enough to conclude treaties and alliances.

SINGLE AIM

"All these wishes, all these guarantees, all these pacts must have one aim, so chosen as to concentrate every effort and fire, every hope, aspiration and sacrifice to realize it. And, since this war is neither a war of states nor even a war of peoples, but indeed a war of men, ideas which will inspire peace must be on the same level of common humanity."

Road Oil Banned In Private Work

OTTAWA, July 9—(CP)—The recent order curtailing use of petroleum asphalt for other than war purposes will mean no asphalt or road oil is available for private road work and that the amount available for shingles, other roofing materials and linoleum will be cut drastically, Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle said yesterday.

The order provides that no person shall, without a permit in writing from the controller, use any asphalt in the construction, repair, or maintenance of any road, in the making of roofing materials or in the manufacture or processing of briquettes, linoleum or oilcloth.

Mr. Cottrelle said it would:

1. Result in a "complete ban" on road oil, commonly used in many parts of Canada to keep down dust and to hold together sand and gravel.

2. Mean that no asphalt would be available for paving new roads, "whether the roads are provincially, municipally or privately owned," and that "the only asphalt paving which will be permitted will be for war purposes."

3. Result in a 50-per-cent cut in the use of asphalt for making shingles, other roofing materials and linoleum.

Cardinal Flays Nazi Massacres

LONDON, July 9—(CP)—Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, Roman Catholic primate of England, declared yesterday that the Nazis had "massacred 700,000 Jews" in Poland since the start of the war and added:

"Their innocent blood cries to Heaven for vengeance. The Lord will repay in his own good time."

In a broadcast on the European service of the BBC, Cardinal Hinsley, who is archbishop of Westminster, said the "Nazis have done to death without the semblance of justice countless innocent people of the non-Aryan race."

"Everything religious, whether Jewish, Catholic, or Orthodox, is the target of the pagan hatred of the Nazi agents in Poland," he declared.

Referring to Nazi religious persecution Cardinal Hinsley said Pope Pius XII "is declared to have been convinced of the truth of reports he has received of the martyrs fate of Poland."

Civilians Can Do The Job

Defence Minister Ralston says no general plan of releasing soldiers for harvest work is possible this year. Leave may be granted to limited numbers of men whose services at home are particularly needed, but intensified training and broadening operations of the army may make even this impracticable.

Unwelcome as the news will be to farmers, the more so because there is a prospect of good to heavy crops over most of the west, military needs must come first in this as in all other matters. The same conditions which make it necessary to call up 25,000 men for training in the August draft also make it necessary that training shall not be interrupted, even for so important a purpose as harvesting the crops.

Should the farm labor situation become tense at harvest time, civilians will thereby be given another opportunity to do a bit of useful service. Thousands of town men could, if so minded, spend their holidays in the harvest fields to their own advantage, that of the farmers, and the economic security of the country. Civilians in enemy countries do that; why not in Canada?

The Pound Of Flesh

The Government of Ontario has refinanced $15,000,000 of a maturing loan. The former rate of interest was 5 per cent. The new rate is 3 per cent. The saving to the Ontario taxpayers will be $300,000 per year.

This refunding was of course put through without any kind of pressure. The buyers of the new bonds did not have to take them. They bought them because the new rate of interest was as attractive as any other investment, with bonds in sight. If they had known where else to put their money at higher rental they would have put it there.

This transaction is not peculiar; it is typical of present day financial operations. Other provinces have refinanced with a corresponding lowering of the interest charges. Bond flotations are relatively long term investments. The interest rates at which they are now being floated means that in the opinion of the buyers the days of high rates have gone, to return no more.

Intrinsically Edmonton's credit is as good as that of Ontario. This city has never defaulted, in the payment of interest or principal. But the credit of the city's bonds are still compelling it to pay an average rate of more than five per cent. For this they have no justification.

What Moscow Doesn't Say

The battle for the Don basin has been going against the Russians, and it has gone badly. Nazi forces have penetrated farther into Russia at that point than they did anywhere along the line last summer. For the reason that they started this year's drive from advanced bases, despite the throw-back they suffered during the winter.

Moscow makes no attempt to minimize the enemy gains, nor to deny that the situation is critical. Quite the contrary. The communiques before admit Berlin's claims with no more than the usual necessary margin of discount, and fully recognize that if the gains can be consolidated and moderately extended, Hitler will have a gap through which to launch his turning movement toward the Caucasus.

It is notable, and hopefully so, that Moscow says nothing about plans to counter this thrust. That Timoshenko has such plans may be taken for granted, but Hitler is being given no hint as to what they are. The silence on this subject is as encouraging as the frank admission that the Red army has been getting the worst of the fighting. The Allies would likely have done better in some other theatres if they had kept their intentions to themselves.

There is nothing in this Nazi push to cause fears that Russia is being beaten or that it will be beaten. Even Hitler can hardly entertain that hope, after what followed his boast last October that Russia had been "crushed". An army that falls back is an army that isn't destroyed. Three million German graves in Russia testify to that all-important fact.

Against Everybody?

The debate as to whether Canada's war policy is to be shaped by the majority, or by a combination of minority groups, is ended. The vote stood 158 to 54. The negative voters included 46 Quebec Liberal members, 2 Independents, and 6 C.C.F. members.

When the bill has been formally read a third time and has received the Royal assent, the Government will be empowered to draft men for overseas service. It will also be empowered to send overseas thousands of men already drafted for home defence and trained or now in training. The immediate effect will be to enlarge the supports available for our oversea forces by the number of those already called and trained under the home conscription law.

One last-minute concession—if they choose to call it a concession—was made to the opponents of the bill. Prime Minister King announced that before enforcing an order-in-council to send drafted men abroad he will ask parliament for a vote of confidence. That meets the argument that arbitrary power is left in the hands of the cabinet to employ conscription for service outside Canada without parliament having any chance to decide whether the circumstances warrant or require this being done.

But it does something else. When that vote of confidence is called for, the objectors will be put on the spot even more conspicuously than they have been. If they still want to oppose the action, they will then have to set up their judgment against that of the military authorities and of almost the latter as proving in saying the situation requires the sending of draftees abroad.

The opponents of the bill have already refused to recognize the right of the majority to rule. If they still wish to resist the majority will, when the wave of confidence motion comes in they will have to refuse also to accept the judgment of the technical men who are charged with the responsibility of conducting the defence of Canada. They will leave them isolated completely from their fellow-Canadians, civilian and military.

Therefore might have done as well if there had been ships enough to keep the supplies flowing in.

Quebec Believes This War Is Only A British War

By GRANT DEXTER

OTTAWA: The simplest way to sum up the attitude of French-Canadian members from Quebec toward overseas conscription is to say that they are almost unanimously opposed to it.

This, of course, is not surprising and if the long debate at Ottawa had disclosed no more than outright opposition it would have contributed little that is new.

Some 35 Quebeckers have spoken in the debate, and only two of them are favorable to the bill. Even these men are opposed to overseas conscription. Members whose unenthusiastic vote "Yes" in the plebiscite—such as Mr. Marier of Jacques Cartier and Mr. Cote of Verdun—are against the bill.

There are, none the less, many French accents in the speeches of the French-Canadian members. To begin with, the opposition to conscription as revealed in the debate, is much stronger in Quebec than in French - Canada areas in the other provinces. Several of the French-Canadian members from the English-speaking provinces, for example, Mr. Bradette of Cochrane, J. M. Dechene of Athabaska, and J. R. Hurtubise of Nipissing, are voting for the bill and tend to form a bridge between Quebec and the rest of the country.

As to what Bill 80 means, there is no English in the minds of the Quebeckers. These amendments mean conscription for overseas service and the bill is being discussed on that basis.

Antagonism

Conceding the antagonism of Quebec, it is true to say that the debate now closing bears no resemblance to that of 1917 or to the debate on the Laurier Navy bill. Nothing is approaching the extreme language used a quarter of a century ago appears in today's Hansard. Nobody is talking of "shooting holes in the Union Jack" or referring to English-Canadian descendants as "of those who disembowelled our ancestors on the Plains of Abraham."

Hitherto the Quebec anti-conscriptionists have been moderate. The dozen or so members who bolted from the Liberal Party on the plebiscite bill and who form the most extreme element in opposition to conscription have not increased their strength. The rank and file of the Liberal members from Quebec, while frankly opposed to conscription and to Bill 80, are friendly to the Government and, after the enactment of the bill, will remain in the Liberal Party. Come what may, they certainly do not desire a change of government. They plainly would prefer to take conscription from the King Government than from any alternative ministry.

Nevertheless, the seriousness of the threat to national unity is obvious. Candid speeches by several of the members confirm the view that little or nothing has been done to prepare French Canada for conscription. The blame for this neglect is attributed to the Government. Thus, Philippe Picard, member for Bellechasse, page 3,954 of unrevised Hansard, said: "Public opinion in Quebec has not been prepared by the Government's agencies. Let us admit that the propaganda and information services have been nothing more to say the least, as far as French Canada is concerned."

Several Quebec members felt that they could not vote for Bill 80 against the wishes of their electors who firmly believe that this is a British war in which, on a realistic view, this country has no part. But they were willing to stake their lives on a campaign to educate the people of Quebec.

This campaign has now begun under the leadership of Hon. Ernest St. Laurent, Minister of Justice. Mr. St. Laurent, speaking on June 18, declared that (page 3,686) "the duty of citizenship is to bear arms and fight and die is a duty which the citizen owes only to his own country." Later, on June 30, he said: "This is the war on its own, in its own interests." Again, page 3,689, ". . . it is a war which has to be won, or Canada will go down with the rest of Ghristian civilization. We are all determined that it shall be won, and I think we are all, or at least the very great majority of us all, resolved to do everything and anything that may be necessary so that it shall be won."

Hitherto that kind of talk has not been heard in Quebec from French-Canadian ministers. It might be expected that Mr. St. Laurent would be helped, not hindered, in explaining to his compatriots the meaning of the war to Canada. It developed, however, that to represent this war as Canada's struggle, to place this nation as an equal partner among the United Nations, is offensive to a group of ultra loyalists in the Conservative Party. Mr. St. Laurent was sharply rebuked for his language by Mr. Hanson, the Conservative leader. Men like J. R. MacNicol and Mr. Bennett, who regard Canada being a belligerent not as a nation, but as a part of the British Empire, "I am a true Britisher" (page 3,806). To these ultra loyalists, the very suggestion that Canada is in this war on her own implies disloyalty and treason.

Obviously, they are a thorn in the side of Mr. St. Laurent and those who are trying to bring Quebec into line with the rest of the nation. Their denial of Canada's role as a principal in the war tends to confirm the statements of the extreme Quebec Nationalists that this is a British war in which Canada need have no part. The Quebec extremists, who insist that this is Britain's war, not Canada's, seize upon the statements of the ultra loyalists and, in effect, say: "You see? That is exactly what we say. This is a British war, not a Canadian war."

Long Memories

As the debate reveals, the Quebeckers have long memories. The imperialistic attitude of many Conservatives recalls to them with be most unfortunate effect, the Nationalist-Conservative campaign of 1910-11. The policy of expansion sown by the alliance between Bourassa and the Conservative party are bearing bitter fruit today. Many facts best forgotten have been disinterred and given new life and currency.

Quebeckers seem unable to free their minds of the auspicion that powerful elements in English-speaking Canada are eager to betray them. In this respect the speech of W. R. McDonald of Pontiac on June 30 is an eye-opener. After all, it happened in 1910-11. Mr. Bourassa wrote and published in 1913 the history of that campaign. Conservative imperialists financed the Nationalists in Quebec; put up money to found Le Devoir and to enlarge its circulation. As Mr. Bourassa put it, "the Nationalists furnished the enthusiasm and the enthusiasm the popularity." "The fact remains," Mr. Bourassa continued, "that the Conservative Party funds and the imperialist treasury helped to defray the election dues of from 30 to 40 candidates."

Thus, as the debate shows, the past haunts the present. The duplicity of the imperialists of English-speaking Canada long ago is a barrier today in Quebec to trust and confidence. Even the ultra loyalists of the Conservative party, by their very insistence that we are in this war not on our own but because of the British connection, are just as real a barrier to uniting the Quebec anticonscriptionists.

In the main, however, the speeches of the Quebec members have been moderate and realistic. As will be shown, many of the objections to overseas conscription seem to all the dissenters will be removed by events. To wait upon events, therefore, may well remove the objections to all except the unreasonable extremists who, after all, are only a handful of the Quebec representation in the House of Commons.

Rubber From Wheat

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor, Bulletin: Whereas it has been proved that the finest synthetic rubber and fuel alcohol can be manufactured from wheat, of which Canada has large quantities, and can produce more every year, and

Whereas no patents, commercial rights or strictly financial considerations should stand in the way of maximum production for victory,

Therefore, be it resolved that United Farmers of Alberta strongly urge the Dominion government to develop the full potential productive capacity of western Canadian agriculture be geared at this period of the national war effort and that in particular a plant or plants for the creation of synthetic rubber from wheat be erected in western Canada with the absolute minimum of delay, and

The above is a copy of one of the resolutions sent on to various departments of the Dominion government from a recent meeting of the executive of the United Farmers of Alberta. The U.F.A. are also seeking the endorsation of the United Grain Growers, the three wheat pools and the farm organizations of the other two provinces. Here is an opportunity for boards of trade and other urban organizations to act as well.

It is most vital to all of our war and peace effort. We have to have it and no patents or agreements or commercial deals should stand in the way. There is no country in the world in which rubber, steel and gasoline enough for farm machinery will produce more foodstuff than right here in western Canada. And what is the wheat and rubber situation?

From wheat you can get alcohol. This is necessary for some kinds of high explosives. Further than that, the Germans and Russians have very good warplane alcohol mixture which some people claim to be equal to, if indeed not superior to our high grade anti-knock fuels. Even more important, this alcohol can be used in the synthetic rubber. Away back in 1936 when Beverley Baxter was saying there was going to be under Fascism than Communism, the then despised Russians made 50,000 tons of synthetic rubber out of this wheat alcohol proposition. The Polish inventor of this process is now in the United States. He gave evidence before a committee of the Senate. Down there a sensible Province can be going to make about one quarter of their synthetic rubber out of wheat.

But that is not all. To erect and put into operation a plant to make rubber out of petroleum takes from two to three years. For the same purpose of the wheat, a plant can be brought into operation in eight months. Petroleum plant takes more steel, the wheat plant more copper.

Down there they are turning their distilleries and breweries over to making industrial alcohol. We can do the same.

To sum up—gasoline and rubber are vital. We can get the rubber out of wheat. We have long since passed the stage where the cost in dollars is the deciding factor. The thing now is to get the stuff and not too late and too little. These are the reasons why the United Farmers of Alberta are urging immediate action on our federal government.

Nurses' Salaries

Editor, Bulletin: There has been much discussion regarding the reason for our present shortage of nurses.

Many reasons have been suggested, but I think people realize the main one. This is the low salary in proportion to the years of study and training.

Educational standards demand that nurses have junior matric standing, preferably senior matric. This in itself is a 12 or 13 year training.

Then comes three long, hard years of study and work. At the end of 15 years, what is offered these graduate nurses? Wages of lower grade than those typists who are disgustingly underpaid themselves.

No Japs Wanted

Editor Bulletin: I must first congratulate you on the fearless manner in which you strive for recognition of the vast importance of social justice as a legitimate war aim.

In this regard, Mr. Harold Weir, is a case for good, and I would respectfully suggest that he keep hammering on the social justice theme. "Get your own house in order," in preference to his excursions into the realms of geopolitics and strategy of the Allied high command strategy.

Mr. Weir has some pertinent things to say about the democracies seeming inability to wage total war, and I recall him telling us that victory will only be ours when we have developed the fighting heart and the fighting spirit—and that Japs have been used for bayonet practice by the filthy Japanese at Hong Kong, yet the Canadian city council (the Fortin boys) have said that certain Japanese may come to dwell here. Vacant houses are practically non-existent here, soldiers' wives (there were soldiers at Hong Kong, remember?) may sleep in the streets. Apparently the yellow men involved have money.

Having called the bluff of our learning, our sciences, our formulas, and our brains, for the furtherance of our own existence, the authorities of the University of Alberta (an institution supported by Alberta taxpayers) are, even now, considering the application of certain Japanese to attend the university, that they may read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest (and inwardly laugh at) the white man's wisdom. No doubt the prospective students have money.

One concludes that our attitude towards money prevents our waging total war.

Keep hammering, Harold Weir, tho' we have churches aplenty in Edmonton, our Aliens might God grow more truly represented by the sign of the dollar than by the sign of the cross. and "for the communist being anti-democratic. If the U.S.S.R. "was an Axis ally" then Canada was an ally of Japan." Who believes that? Hundreds of Canadian Communists died for democracy in the struggle against Franco, Hitler and Mussolini in Spain when Mr. Jacques never left his wife's apron.

Churchill and Roosevelt have settled "the second front" question for sound strategical reasons. It is not a matter of "helping Russia" but doing our part for victory. The second front will draw Nazi forces from our Soviet front and enable the Red army to drive the hordes east of Russia as they have sworn to do in 1942. Hitler will be caught in a vise. Happily, we do not have to depend upon the advice of Mr. Jacques, whose defensive views have already proved disastrous. Only the "second front" spirit and effort will achieve victory.

Corrects Mr. Coldwell

Editor, Bulletin: I note that Mr. Coldwell, the leader of the C.C.F., has been complaining bitterly about disruption in Canada, and he ought to know because it is a favorite weapon of his party.

He told a thumping half-truth in stating that in Australia they had limited compulsion and polls to 4%. It is true that such a law has been enacted but he did not tell us that it has not been put into force owing to the storm of opposition.

He told Mr. Coldwell do with the man who has bought shares at from two to 20 times their original issue price? He might not even get 1% on his money.

Strong in his handsome stipend Mr. Coldwell would have no hesitation in condemning many old retired people living on some income fixed at the end only) to additional penury.

The world is too full of people already who have to be fed. It must be done at all cost. But the cranks are out in full force and one and all, must more particularly the C.C.F. are out to use the war as a lever to get their own ends.

The war alone counts—let Mr. Coldwell remember the beautiful social legislation of Norway and Denmark—blown away with the smoke from Hitler's guns.

LEEDS YORKSHIRE POST

Having established, I hope, that printers' errors are rarely the printers' fault, we may now proceed to a few choice examples.

By misplacing a letter, a machine operated by a compositor of outstanding accuracy once obliged a politician to say what he probably had in mind but did not intend to reveal. Instead of "the masses" it produced "them asses."

A letter's failure to emerge has been known to amend the first line of the Old Hundredth so that it read: "All people that on earth do well."

Quebec's Education

By HAROLD L. WEIR

Jean-Charles Harvey, brilliant and energetic editor of the French-Canadian newspaper Le Jour, declares that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has failed lamentably to educate the people of Quebec in democracy.

He has failed, he says, to reach the French-Canadian people with those war ideas and aims and that propaganda which are essential to the development of a sense of war responsibility.

There is no doubt the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is highly culpable in this respect as it is equally culpable in many other respects.

Harold L. Weir

An article on this page yesterday showed how the CBC French networks appears to studiously avoid all features that might instruct French-Canadians in a national point of view and to limit its presentations to those which foster the narrow parochialism and race consciousness of Quebec people.

It is absolutely certain that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's educative efforts have been misdirected and even stupidly arranged in French Canada.

Indeed, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation presents a problem that some honest men in Quebec should set out resolutely to solve.

But that is only by the way.

The Quebec's problem that interests us here.

Ill-Informed

I am glad that Jean-Charles Harvey has taken the CBC to task for the misdirection and insufficiency of its educative efforts in Quebec, because, in doing so, he has placed an unerring finger on the cause of Quebec's ailment.

Education, or rather miseducation.

If, in the opinion of so eminent a French-Canadian as Mr. Harvey, the CBC could have purged Quebec of its parochialism with effective educative broadcasting, what miracles of enlightenment might not have been worked by the Quebec educational authorities themselves?

Conversely, if the CBC is culpable for failing to give the French-Canadians the right kind of educative broadcasts, how much more guilty is the Quebec provincial education for failing to give Quebec youth the proper instruction all its life?

At any rate, Mr. Harvey establishes these facts:

1. That the failure of Quebec to realize its national responsibility is due to an educational defect.

2. That the Quebec isolationists and nationalists because they are singularly ill-informed.

Misinformed

But the thing goes much further than that.

The lack of information or of effective education could not be responsible for some of the ideas expressed by Quebec nationalists.

A man must be something much more sinister than an ignorant parochial "patriot" or "British war" and that Canada is responsible only for her own defence.

As a matter of fact, too, I would know better. If he did not know that this country is fighting for her very life and must fight for it every wherever he is to be found.

A man has to be something more than merely ill-informed to flout the will of the majority of the Canadian people in the overseas conscription issue.

Even a child knows today what democracy means.

But Quebec has done all these things. She abstained from the vote. She swears that this is "Britain's war" and that Canada should only defend herself. She ignores the will of the majority in the conscription issue.

We cannot say that Quebec people take these stands because they are ill-informed. That is something more than that. There is a positive aggressive element in their arguments. It is a form of isolation that creates militant ideas, but not misinformation.

Quebec is grievously, iniquitously and viciously misinformed.

Miseducation

What is responsible for this deliberate misinformation that causes the Quebec lukewarm in the war, reactionary in her social ideas and fascist in her attitude to democracy?

Mr. Jean-Charles Harvey has said it.

Mr. Harvey says that education is at the foundation of French-Canadian error.

And we have already seen that the failure is due to lack of education but to wrong education.

Quebec's solidarity is deliberately putting notions into the heads of French-Canadians that are anti-British, anti-democratic and anti-social.

Since this is a British, democratic war, the education that the situation is intensely grave.

It may be noted that the United States is solving all those difficulties by insisting on the observance of certain rules in all its schools.

English must be taught to everybody. Americanism must be taught to everybody. Under this system, parochialism, racialism and isolationism are reduced to minimum.

In Canada, we permit and even encourage these things.

No Eire Here

I have been freely accused of promoting disunity in Canada because of my views on the Quebec situation.

Well, I can only say that there has never been unity or harmony where minorities are allowed to run wild.

I have never seen a happy, peaceful home where children run the house and browbeat their parents.

Harmony is only possible where these isolationists because the intelligent control of a person or group most capable of enforcing authority.

Such a can easily develop into another Eire, a mischievous, pinpricking, expensive, hysterical and treacherous thorn.

Well, we won't have that here. We won't have it for a minute. With a the Japanese at our back-door and the Germans infesting the ocean at the front, we have no time nor patience for bothersome little traitors who, because they are soaked with vicious propaganda, are holding up the war effort and endangering the lives of every woman and child in the country.

Hanson Claims War Taxes Used Other Purposes

OTTAWA, July 9—(CP)—Conservative house leader Hanson said in the House of Commons yesterday that 25 per cent of taxes paid for war purposes was being diverted to other purposes.

Protesting methods adopted by the government to provide for compensation up to $2,400 for fishermen suffering equipment losses due to the war, Mr. Hanson said the provision should have been made by statute and not by order-in-council.

"The whole principle of dealing with public moneys on this basis is wrong," Mr. Hanson said in a debate on the war risk insurance bill.

DONE BY STATUTE

"It should be done under a statute and it should not be left to the discretion of the minister no matter how fair-minded he may be. I wonder what the people of this country who now are being called upon to pay more and more and more in the way of direct taxation will think when they find out that 25 per cent of all taxes they pay for the purposes of the war effort is being diverted to other objects.

"This is the indictment against the budget; 25 per cent of the money which the people are to contribute is being frittered away on useless agencies which are costing huge sums of money and are in no way connected directly with the war."

The Conservative house leader said he protested only the method, not the principle of paying compensation for fishermen suffering loss due to the war.

Finance Minister Ilsley said the government had the power to enact the necessary war risk legislation by order-in-council.

It was important the legislation go through quickly and the house should assist.

Nazi Battleship Tirpitz Is Hit By Two Torpedoes

torpedoes were slammed into her hull, Russian dispatches said.

The submarine which made the attack was a veteran of actions against German patrolliers and convoys in the Barents Sea. Once she sank a large transport in an enemy convoy and escaped safely despite a two-hour pursuit with depth charges.

The Admiral Von Tirpitz is the 35,000-ton twin of the Bismarck, the German battleship which sank Britain's battle cruiser Hood and, in turn, was cornered and sunk herself by the combined might of British air and sea power.

Until a Soviet information bureau bulletin disclosed today the Admiral Von Tirpitz had been hit twice in the Barents Sea, around the north cape of Norway, there had been no word she was loose to prey on merchantmen bearing Russia vital war supplies from Britain and the United States.

CHASED IN MARCH

She was last located in Trondheim in March, in a deep fjord on the Norwegian west coast, after British torpedo planes spotted her, evidently headed for an attack on a Russia-bound convoy and chased her into hiding.

Tass, Soviet news agency, said the Admiral Von Tirpitz and three German heavy cruisers and eight destroyers, were attacking a convoy bound for Murmansk when she was picked off by the Red navy submarine.

The general area of the encounter in the Barents Sea placed the action almost at the convoy's destination.

Other dispatches said the German warships left Norwegian fjords several days ago aiming at intercepting a large convoy bringing arms from Britain and the United States.

CONVOY REACHES PORT

Their operations were disrupted by the torpedoing of the Admiral Von Tirpitz, these advices said, and all ships of the convoy were declared to have arrived safely in a Soviet port.

Russian announcements did not contain the specific damage indicted on the Nazi battleship or the harbor where she sought refuge.

Thus, there is no intimation whether the Admiral Von Tirpitz has been eliminated for any considerable time as a menace to the Allies' lifeline of ships or whether she can be restored to battle trim without attempting the long, perilous dash to a home port.

The Russian announcement followed Nazi claims that German sea and air forces had sunk 22 of 36 merchant ships bound in a convoy for Russia as well as a United States cruiser, part of a formidable escort including an Allied battleship.

HINT OF NAZI CONVOY

There was no hint in the German communiques, however that the convoy had been assisted by a surface raider. There reported sinkings all unconfirmed by any source, were ascribed to air and U-boat attacks.

Mention in the Russian communique that a merchant shipping ship had been sunk in the Barents sea and that another merchantman had been damaged along with a warship suggested the Nazis might have been trying to push through a convoy of their own to northern Norway or Finland.

NAZIS DENY SHIP HAS BEEN DAMAGED

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts), July 9.—(AP)—The high command today denied a Russian report that Germany's biggest battleship, the Admiral Von Tirpitz, had been attacked and damaged.

The high command's daily communique said:

"The Soviet assertion that the German battleship Tirpitz had been hit by a torpedo is purely invented. The battleship has neither been hit nor damaged."

Aussie Soldiers Are Ordered To Salute Officers

CANBERRA, July 9 — (AAP)— Henceforth all Australian soldiers must salute commissioned officers at all times whether on or off duty, except in a crowded thoroughfare or assembly, during exercises on the field, when on parade under the immediate control of their superior or when precluded by the nature of their duties.

This decision was made yesterday by the war cabinet on the recommendation of Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, commander in chief of Allied land forces, who reported the present situation in Australia and the distribution of troops at battle stations required a general improvement in the standard of discipline.

Looking Them Over

—By Jack Kelly—

WE are sitting around indulging in one of those easy-going gab sessions that skip lightly from world war strategy and post-war economics to what beetle looks most promising for tomorrow at the Calgary races. The rain is coming down in a steady drizzle outside and no one is at all anxious to go out.

Jack DeLong, who turns out "Getting Around" and used to be a sports writer in bygone days, has been giving the sport section a lackadaisical once-over. He shakes his head sadly.

"Maybe I'm just another prejudiced guy who thinks the only big stuff that ever happened was in his day, but I just can't get all hot and bothered about sport anymore," declares Jack.

"There doesn't seem to be the same thrills, the color, the horseplay and fun in it now that there used to be."

Strangely enough I agree with DeLong—something which disappoints him no little for it prevents the development of a 15-pound argument with no words barred.

So we go back and cut up old touches, highlights from the days when Keats and his Eskimos were ten times more important to folks around here than the biggest news from Europe.

Old Classics

FOR example we go over some of the classic horseplay pulled off by the past master of zags—Bill Tobin, the snappy little gent Keats brought here as a goalie and who is now chief executive for the Chicago Black Hawks.

Keats was superstitious about finding stray dogs. If he met one, he would invariably buy it a big feed and probably take it home. Somehow or other, Tobin arranged it one day so that just about every stray mutt in Edmonton was delivered to Keats.

Another time, Keats made the mistake of telling a Chinaman to call at his place in the morning for some laundry. Tobin went and methodically visited every Chinese laundry in the city, requesting each and every one to be at Keats' place around 6.00 a.m. the next day. A dozen or more eager celestials showed up at an hour when Keats was never known to be out of bed. The resulting fireworks were terrific.

Out on the ice it was the same cock-eyed phantasmagoria of the unexpected. It was rarely that a game was run off smoothly without the players stopping to the folks chattering until the next engagement. The story wasn't so much who won or lost as how. Take the Keats-Dutton feud for example. It was by long odds the hottest and most fiery that these parts ever saw.

Hated to Pieces

FANS actually developed bitter hatreds of every man on the opposing club. Out at Saskatoon the folks would have gladly contributed a year's pay for the privilege of putting Keats through a sausage machine.

Amby Moran, Dutton, Sparrow, Keats and such kindred spirits were endowed by nature with the pigments that produced color. There was nothing studied or practiced about their outbursts. They just followed the dictates of their turbulent spirits and it captured the public imagination here as nothing before or since ever did.

Maybe the conditions of mind and society necessary for such feverish enthusiasm have passed for ever. I don't know, but I'd like to see that golden era return just once more. Now we have gotten so confounded polite and polished that we wouldn't think of booing an opposing team on general principles. We even cheer them for good plays. It's all very sporting and friendly, but the old zing isn't in it.

Sometimes I think this highly rational, civilized and sporting attitude that we have developed is one of the greatest obstacles we have to combat in our drive to win this war. We've lost that crude old ability to become fired with anger and hate. We want to conduct our fighting with the polished finesse of a chess game instead of wading in with fire in our eyes and an axe in our hands.

Maybe this war will arouse those more primitive passions again and when it is all over we will find ourself in another sport era which is devoid of kid gloves.

Arrows Edge Out Hornets By 6-4 Score

SPORTS BULLETINS

Believe It Or Not— —By Robt. Ripley

Ellyson Chased In Sixth Inning

Arrows took a full game lead in the Edmonton Senior Baseball League when they shaded Hornets 6-4 in last night's scheduled affair at Renfrew Park.

The Aircraft Repair boys were coasting along with a two-run advantage and giving every indication of making it four straight wins when Jerry Ellyson ran into a basketfull of grief in the sixth, as Dick Speer's crew shoved across four counters to clinch the decision.

Dan Hackler took over the mound duties with three runs in and Mel Colville perched on second. Mel Ottem brought in the fourth counter by slashing out a single to right field, but Hackler threw out Stevenson at first to end the rally.

For the next three innings the Arrows went down in order only nine men facing the Hornet chucker.

The league leaders grabbed off a singleton in the opening session. Freddy Lupul, who has proved very adept at starting things in the league this season and who has reached first more than any other man in the loop, got a life when Jock Tennant dropped the throw to first.

Eddie Williams hit into centre and after Colville had struck out and Ottem had flied to Morgan at third, Dougie Stevenson cracked one into left field and Lupul came all the way through the mud from second.

Arrows added another marker in the second. With one down Joe Shandro hit into right field, went to the next stopping place on Pete Danylowich's single and loped home on Morris Hawkey's smash into left field.

Hornets drew even in their half of the second on successive hits by Jim Kelly, Ralph Morgan and Jerry Ellyson and they made the count 3-2 in the next frame.

Art Soley opened with a single. He was sacrificed on to second by McAuley and Hackler's drive into right made the score 4-2.

In the sixth Ellyson got Shandro, first man up, but walked Danylowich. Hawley also went out third to first and then the trouble began.

Freddy Lupul scratched a hit into left and Williams bounced one off Morgan's glove. Mac Colville's double brought in two more runs and Ottem the fourth.

Spalding Claims Scrap Rubber Does Not Affect Ball

NEW YORK, July 9.—(AP)—While denying that baseballs used by the two major leagues this season had lost any of their resiliency, the Spalding Company admitted in a statement released here Wednesday that it has been necessary to use scrap rubber in the cores since last January instead of the pure crude rubber formerly employed.

Players of both leagues have been protesting vehemently ever since the campaign began that the official ball was much less lively than in other years. The manufacturers' statement was in reply to their complaints.

The core still features the cushion centre of cork and rubber," said Spalding. "The only difference here is that crude rubber is no longer used in the centre, having been replaced by high grade reclaimed rubber. Driving machine tests conclusively show that no distance has been lost by this change."

Scarlet Hanover Beaten In Feature Of Grand Circuit

GOSHEN, N.Y., July 9.—(AP)—The junior trotters in the $1,500 Chester stake featured the Grand Circuit card at Goshen raceway Wednesday and resulted in the defeat of the top heavy favorite Scarlet Hanover, winner of the Harriman challenge stake here last week.

The winner turned up in Austin Hanover, owned by T. G. Graney of Sparkhill, N.Y., and driven by Fred Brooks. Bad manners at the post caused the downfall of the favorite.

Lew McKinney, from the main stable of Sullivan and Mawhinney, won the event for 15 class pacers, nosing out Dillmfe in the final heat. Lew McKinney was driven by Wayne Smart, replacing the stable driver Franklin Safford, who drew a suspension Tuesday for beating the barrier. Silver May of the Montour stable of Coraopolis, Pa., won the 22 trot, her second win of the meeting.

Toronto, owned by Joseph Neville of Delaware, Ohio, and driven by Wayne Smart, won the 20 pace for which he was a heavy favorite.

M.P.'s Take Time Out For Baseball

OTTAWA, July 9—(CP)—Nine members of the House of Commons staff took off their uniform coats Wednesday night, rolled up their sleeves and proceeded to entertain nine members of parliament by a 9-8 score in a baseball game.

The game, which put the staff on top 2-1 in a series played the last three Wednesday nights, ended in the sixth inning. The official reason was because the Winnipeg Sea Cadet band had started a concert nearby on Parliament Hill, but there were some reports the members were stiffening up. The contest took place behind the west block near the centre parliament building.

Attendance, Betting Increase

Twilight Racing Proves Great Success At Winnipeg

WINNIPEG, July 9.—(CP)—Twilight racing, inaugurated on Winnipeg and St. Boniface tracks this year, is held responsible for major increases in both attendance and betting at Whittier and Polo Park tracks during the 28-day racing meetings which closed at Polo Park Saturday.

Official figures, released Wednesday by Glen L. Cousley, provincial commissioner of taxation, showed paid attendance of 27,141 at Whittier, compared with 24,512 in 1941, while paid attendance figures at Polo Park jumped to 39,146 from 32,212 last year.

The provincial treasury will collect about $100,000 in taxes on admissions and in commissions on betting, which totalled $2,399,296 at both tracks. Of the total, $947,384 was wagered at Whittier Park, while $1,451,913 went through Polo Park pari-mutuel machines.

This was a $305,900 increase over the $2,093,366 wagered on both tracks in 1941.

Officials said the attendance figures did not include admission passes, which amounted to 3,702 at Whittier and 5,069 at Polo.

Best day's betting was at Polo Park July 1, the day of the Canadian Derby, when 6,313 fans laid bets amounting to $185,872.

There was no betting on the Derby itself July 1, because Ten to Ace, crack eastern champion who finished last in the biggest upset in western Canada racing history, was considered too sure a winner. However, officials who called off betting on the Derby added an eighth race to the usual seven-race day as a consideration for betting fans.

Baseball Fans Guessing

Lou Warneke Sold To Cubs By St. Louis At Waiver Price

ST. LOUIS, July 9.—(AP)—In the midst of a desperate drive to overtake Brooklyn Dodgers, St. Louis Cardinals sold lean Lon Warneke to the Chicago Cubs for the waiver price of $7,500 in a deal that puzzled baseball fans.

The 35-year-old veteran pitcher, last member of the famed mudcats' bands of Cardinal outups, has not been fully effective this season. Late rounding into form, he has won six games and lost four, scarcely the record of a has-been.

Last year, Warneke won 17 games, including a no-hit triumph over Cincinnati, and lost only nine. His all-time major league total is 163 victories and 108 defeats.

He was probably the highest salaried man on the St. Louis roster with a contract calling for about $15,000, and one critic was unkind enough to say the money might have influenced the decision to let him go.

However, officials of the team were positive in saying the deal was based solely on other considerations. They said Warneke was slipping and his home run ball was coming up with too frequent regularity.

"With a weak-hitting team, that home run ball is a dangerous thing" one official said. "Our other pitchers have been stingy with runs. We believe we have excellent starting replacements in John Beazley and Murry Dickson."

Warneke originally was the property of the Cardinal organization but he was released and broke into the major leagues with the Cubs in 1930. He had a brilliant year in 1932, winning 22 and losing only six, and has never been a pitching problem since.

After the 1936 season, he was traded to the Cardinals.

Dodgers Play Hornets Saturday

As a result of change being made in the Senior Baseball League schedule due to the exhibition, Dodgers will play Hornets on Saturday night next starting at 7 o'clock. There will be no senior ball during exhibition week.

Sunday's game is Arrows versus Dodgers.

Summer School

Basketball, softball and tennis, golf, track and swimming will be included in the sports at the Edmonton Summer School this year.

Arrangements have been made for the first game of softball to be played at the Garneau grounds at 10 a.m. on Saturday.

QUINELLA $8.45.

Commencing Monday and continuing until Saturday there will be seven races each day and the entries include the majority of the finest horses on the western circuit.

An innovation this year will be the switching of the daily double to the first and second races instead of the first and third as in other years.

Horse racing has met with marked success throughout Canada and the United States this year. The recent Winnipeg meetings were the most successful held at the Manitoba capitol since the boom year of 1929. Both attendance and pari-mutuel wagering showed large increases and much the same picture has prevailed during the first two days of the Stampede at Calgary.

Plenty of horses will be available for Edmonton's meeting with many newcomers due to arrive on Saturday's special train.

Leading handicap horses will be the Fort Garry stable's Pomkee, My Feng, winner of the 1940 and 1941 runnings of the rich Polo Park Handicap at Winnipeg, Mickey's Best, Killarney L., Andian, Happy Dinah, Ezrevinu, Sky Grey, Contributor, Battleford, Dexter, Sable Gift, Royal Memory, Black Memory, Mr. Finn, Sun Madras, and Glad Hand.

Handicap and other events should all be well filled for the coming six days of sport. As usual racing secretary Schilling will be featuring many long distance marathon races.

Some of the best of this class of performer seen at the Winnipeg meetings will be shipped to Edmonton. These include Glad Hand, Knock, Crackedie, Ancient Rites, Royal Memory, Mr. Finn and Pepper Pot.

Jockeys booked to ride at Edmonton are: R. Summers, W. Young, J. Sept, J. Sivewright, R. Russell, F. Soloman, A. McGahan, G. Morses, R. Barcroft, R. Johnston, G. Godley, E. Getschel, N. Nothcott.

The W. Young mentioned is the boy who was the riding sensation of the western Canada fairs last year. He is not the W. H. Young who rode at the recent Winnipeg meetings.

George W. Schilling will be presiding steward and racing secretary. James Donovan will be back as starter. H. Rudd and J. C. McRae will be the placing judges. E. D. Adams will be steward representing the Prairie Thoroughbred Breeders and Racing Association.

Bill Turns the Spotlight on Williams

BOSTON, July 9.—The war news is awful; life's not what it used to be without gas, sugar and coffee; the weather is something that rhymes with frowsy, but, by General Hickory Jackson, all the normal and standard features of life-as-it-was haven't vanished entirely for we're having trouble again. I mean that Ted Williams incident the other day, to which I can now add certain sidelights. It all started, as you may remember, when Williams and Pesky got mixed up on that fly and it fell between them like the gentle dew from heaven.

Then the fan in left field yelled whatever he yelled at him, and Mr. Williams endeavored to retaliate later by trying to hit the guy with a line foul instead of going after a home run. An accident developed and he happened a two-bagger instead, but he obviously loitered along the base paths, apparently figuring that if the gent wanted to call him a loafer, he'd show him some real loafing.

Manager Cronin, thereupon, got sore, in turn and told young Mr. Williams to get out of the ball game. Sleeping upon the matter overnight, and apparently not finding it comfortable, Cronin assembled his players and held a one-man locker room court martial. Williams was ordered to apologize to his team mates, so the inside version goes; we bribed out as few players as ever been boiled out, as the boys say, was fined $250, and ordered to give his pay to all charities of grace the bench from here in.

Prior to this rather energetic court session, young Mr. Williams received the press and expressed himself in the following sentiments:

"I know it was all my fault and Joe did the right thing in taking me out of the ball game. I'm just thick-headed enough, and screwy enough and childish enough to let those wolves in left field get under my skin. Some day I'm going to bring 25 pounds of raw hamburger out there and invite those wolves down to enjoy it. . . . I guess I was just sort of unconscious out there yesterday."

TRIES TO BOMB WOLVES WITH FOULS

As to what he had in mind when he attempted tricks with that bat he explained: "I was going to take three strikes right through the gut (meaning he was going to strike out deliberately). Then I decided to try to hit a few line fouls at those wolves in left field (meaning he hoped to conk one or more of the customers)."

But then came the mistake when he hit a fair ball, and his confession covering that happenstance was: "I was probably the most surprised guy in the park when I looked up and saw that I had hit the fence on that third swing."

Thus spoke, not Zarathustra, but Theo. S. Williams, "The Blended Splinter," this being as naive a confession of not-trying as any professional ath-a-lete ever poured forth to a palpitant pad-and-pencil platoon.

That was B.C.—before Cronin—and the $250 assessment.

His complete statement afterwards consisted of the monosyllable, "Jeepers."

And I, for one, say thank heaven for it. It's better reading than Egypt, anyhow.

HAD BEEN RIDING WILLIAMS FOR DAYS

That's the running gears of the recent Williams cause celebre. Details can be added to taste. Williams pluralizes the personal sources of his torment, and speaks steadily of "wolves." Previous testimony had it wolf—just one. Word bird come aloft to the hanging gardens of the press, and the pigeons that some had been steadily riding Williams out in that left field corner for several days.

If that's true, it seems a pretty long time to have to take it, but even so, it seems to be accepted as official that if some rooter wants to presume upon the privilege of having paid for his seat sufficiently to hurl ridicule and abuse at the athletes in front of him, the athletes are normally and professionally obligated to take it. Williams has a pretty bad record in this respect. They've yelled at him before and he got to yelling back. Some of the things he yelled were not very polite. Some of the ladies were shocked and their escorts were outraged. That, however, was a long time ago. There's been none of that type of repartee this year.

The Williams retaliation this time seemed to be copied from the modern revenge technique in industry. What he really went on was a slow-down, almost a sit-down, strike. From any testimony today can be gathered, the particular heckle of the wolf that really got the Williams angora wasn't particularly brutal as good heckles go. Williams was apparently daydreaming when the fly ball that started the trouble was hit to his short field. It wasn't the easiest chance on earth, but a wide-awake fielder might have been nearer the ball when it landed safely.

DECIDES TO GO IN AND STRIKE OUT

And the guy merely yelled, "Hey, Williams, why don't you move off that dime?"

So Williams decided to go in and strike out, the resulting being, apparently, that he'd rob the gentleman of the thrill of seeing him hit one. He took a couple, and then he suddenly achieved a better idea. Why not try to bomb the guy out of the park with a succession of line fouls? That's a brand new high in considered marksmanship, but The Kid apparently thought he could do it.

When he accidentally hit one fair and found himself on second base, he reverted to the slow-down technique.

That's when Joe Cronin, sweltering in the dugout and mopping his face with a bath towel, got up and threw the towel in a visible and unmistakable gesture of boiling anger into the side of the dugout so hard that it almost split a plank.

Young Mr. Williams might have done some fast reconsidering, if he'd heard part of the interchanges over in certain third base boxes. Two navy officers were sitting down there with some friends. One was a three-striper, the other a two. They weren't quickie jobs, either. Their faces had years on 'em and so did their service ribbons. Williams, of course, is awaiting his call into naval aviation, which is still the navy, all said and done.

"The boy I went out with last night was awfully thoughtful. He rang up to see if I got home all right!"

Cosgrave First In Chuckwagon Race But Loses Stove

CALGARY, July 9.—(AP)—A stove which bounced from his wagon to the track and tripped an outrider's horse, may have robbed Dick Cosgrave of Rawdon, Alta., of the world's chuckwagon championship last night at the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede.

Cosgrave set a running time of 1:12 3-5 in a photo finish 1-5 of a second ahead of Charlie Lundseath, Bowden, Alta. Penalties will be added to Cosgrave's time for the loss of the stove and rider.

Shady Green, Rumley, whose outfit ran third in the second heat, entered a protest to the judges, claiming outriders from another outfit interfered with his men. Due to this protest the official timing of the races including penalties, has been held up until the judges investigate.

It was the third straight night Cosgrave had won the event with a team hurriedly borrowed from other contestants' spares after his own horses were killed several weeks ago when his barn burned down.

South Defeats North 6-1 International League Game

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 9,—(CP)—The South, pushing across three runs in the first inning and stemming every threat thereafter, defeated the North 6-1 here Wednesday night in the first International League All-Star baseball game.

The Southern stars, representing the southern cities in the circuit, entered the game slight favorites. They displayed their power quickly, blasting out four hits in the first inning off Toronto's Strincevich, who opened for the North.

They scored a fourth run in the third inning and two more in the fifth but were held scoreless from then on.

The North scored its tally in the fourth inning.

A crowd of 6,352 watched the contest, proceeds of which go to purchase of athletic equipment for the armed forces of Canada and the United States.

Walk-Rites Beat South Siders 7-0 In Girls' Softball

Walk-Rites shut out South Side Athletics 7-0 in last night's Senior Girls' Softball League game at Kingsway Park.

Annabelle Thompson limited the South Siders to four hits, two of which were collected by Jean Ward, the opposing chucker in four trips to the plate.

Walk-Rites pitcher struck out five and had a perfect day at bat getting four hits, one of which was a double out of four times up. She also batted in a pair of runs.

Mabel McCormick had two for four and scored four runs.

Walk-Rites came up with a pair of counters in the initial inning. Mickey McConnell singled through short and Dolly Lane drove out a three-bagger. Dolly came in when Jean Barton grounded out.

In the second Mabel McCormick and Annabelle Thompson singled, the run coming in on the error which followed.

In the fourth Murray Saidman's crew gathered in three more counters. McCormick again started things moving by reaching first on an error, and Thompson hit safely. Both runners scored on Jean Barton's single.

In the fifth Thompson's double sent in McCormick with the final run.

Johnny Longden Pilots Winner

NEW YORK, July 9.—(AP)—Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Optimism defeated five other two-year-old fillies easily yesterday in the $20,000 Demoiselle stakes at Empire City.

Johnny Longden of Cardston, Alta., deprived of a mount when the favorite Dogie Heigh, was scratched, rode Optimism instead and guided the Phipps color bearer to the wire a length and a half in front of the Christiana stable's Bras. Marshall Field's Demolition was third, a length farther away.

Optimism picked up a purse of $8,100 and paid $11.40 in the mutuels, covering the five and three-quarter furlongs in 1:09 2-5 with an impost of 111 pounds. It was her first stakes victory.

Mid-Season's Crop Prospects Best In Years

OTTAWA, July 9.—(CP)—Crop conditions were maintained or improved through June to a point where "one of the most favorable mid-season prospects in years" has been reported across Canada, the Dominion bureau of statistics reported in a crop condition report.

"The spring wheat crop in the prairie provinces was in the best June 30 condition since the bumper years of 1927 and 1928," the bureau said.

ALL-CANADA FIGURES

For all Canada, the condition of field crops at June 30, expressed as percentages of the long-time average yield per acre, was reported as follows, with figures for last May 31 and June 30, 1941, in brackets:

Fall wheat 103 (103, 86); spring wheat 136 (109, 80); all wheat 135 (108, 80); oats 100 (94, 87); barley 100 (92, 89); fall rye 93 (92, 83); spring rye 98 (93, 86); all rye 95 (92, 84); mixed grains 97 (96, 84); flaxseed 94 (—, 87); hay and clover 101 (99, 85); alfalfa 102 (97, 82); sugar beets 96 (—, 98); pasture 104 (101, 83).

PRAIRIE PROVINCES

In the prairie provinces, the condition of principal cereal crops at June 30 was reported as follows:

Saskatchewan—Wheat 137 (103, 71); Oats 103 (92, 82); Barley 104 (94, 81); Rye 93 (92, 77); Flaxseed 94 (—, 83); Alberta—wheat 139 (114, 80); Oats 100 (89, 89); Barley 99 (89, 90); Rye 93 (87, 87); Flaxseed 96 (—, 91).

The first estimate of acreage of late-sown crops and hay in 1942 is as follows, with the 1941 preliminary census acreages, except for sugar beets, in brackets: hay and clover 9,583,000 (9,469,000); alfalfa 964,000 (973,100); fodder corn 406,300 (419,100); sugar beets 64,800 (70,700).

The bureau also gave figures for the condition of spring wheat in the prairie provinces, based on an analysis of weather factors in 1942 and 1941 and expressed in terms of the long-term average yields per acre for each province, which stand at 16 bushels for Manitoba, 15 bushels for Saskatchewan and 18 bushels for Alberta.

"In contrast this year, the Saskatchewan condition figure rose from 103 at May 31 to 137 at June 30. Between the same dates last year the Saskatchewan condition dropped from 92 to 71.

ALBERTA'S CONDITION

"Alberta's wheat condition this year rose from 114 at May 31 to 139 at June 30, having dropped from 98 to 80 between the same dates last year. Manitoba's condition rose from 124 to 129 against a decline from 128 to 121 through June, 1941."

Minor Export Sale Of Wheat

WINNIPEG, July 9—(CP)—A minor export sale in Canadian wheat was transacted on the Winnipeg grain exchange today, during an uneventful session. The market closed with the Puly wheat future ⅛ higher at 80⅝a and October at 90 cents a bushel.

In the pit the first wheat futures trade was posted during last hour of trading. October wheat was neglected. Near the close at Chicago, wheat was up ¾ of a cent.

No. 1 Northern changed hands in the cash wheat market with shippers the buyers. Spreads held firm.

Volume of business was small in the coarse grains. A little selling was reported in oats and barley at prices unchanged to a little lower than the previous close. The rye future was apparently taken against sales in southern markets and at one point prices were 1⅜ higher.

Country marketings yesterday totalled 668,000 bushels and the same day last year they were 741,000. Grain inspections at Winnipeg yesterday totalled 557 compared with 595 a year ago.

Market Letters

WINNIPEG, July 9—Crop prospects continued very rosy and the Free Press crop report this afternoon is expected to report unusually fine prospects. There were rains overnight in many parts of Manitoba and Saskatchewan with moderate temperatures continuing in all three provinces. Ottawa announces that gift shipments of wheat from Canada to Greece will amount to an excess of 6 million dollars during the present fiscal year. Offsetting this sales of Canadian flour to Russia have now been discontinued as this market is now being supplied from the United States.

CHICAGO, July 9—Rapidity with which wheat advanced on the senate passage of full parity loans some interests feared eliminated a good deal of the short interest leaving the market in a poor technical condition to withstand the antagonism which 100 per cent parity loans are still likely to encounter. Many close market observers were inclined to take profits at least until such time as more is definitely known regarding attitude of the President and the house toward the measure

Allied Air Power Stronger In Egypt

CAIRO, July 9—(AP)—The Allied air forces—British, Australia, South African and American—are in a stronger position now than when the present campaign began six weeks ago, the R.A.F. disclosed yesterday.

In the 42 days, it was announced 134 Axis planes were shot down in air combat for certain, more than 100 more were destroyed on the ground and 50 by anti-aircraft defences. The number of planes listed as probably shotdown run into the hundreds more.

During the same period 110 pilots were listed as missing—figures corresponding only roughly to plane losses because many planes shot down have been repaired and are flying again.

Since Nov. 18, 1941 more than 483 Axis aircraft have been shot down for certain in the western desert alone, while those listed as probably destroyed run into the thousands.

This does not include Axis losses over Malta.

Tribute Is Paid To Record Retired Head Of City Police

Former Chief Constable Feted At Gala Banquet By Members Of Force

Sixty members of the Edmonton city police force paid tribute to former Chief Constable A. G. Shute, at a banquet held in his honor at the Macdonald hotel Wednesday night. Every department of the force was represented at the feast which was presided over by Chief Constable Matthew Blackwood.

Seated at the head table were Inspector M. Kelley, Inspector J. J. Shaw, Detective Inspector John Leslie, Sgt. Major Alex Riddell, Chief Blackwood and former Chief Shute.

The event was sponsored by the Edmonton Police Amateur Athletic club.

HONOR GUESTS

Guests of honor included Mrs. Emma Pennefather, police matron and Miss Lulu MacPhee, secretary.

James Clements led the singsong and Dennis Clayton accompanied at the piano.

During the course of the program Chief Blackwood presented ex-Chief Shute with an engraved diamond ring on behalf of the association.

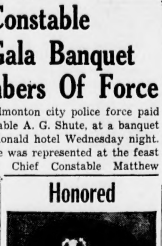

In making the presentation, Chief Blackwood stated that the retiring chief had set a record believed to be second to none in Canada by serving as Chief Constable of the local force for over 22 years.

During that time the Chief was highly respected by the staff, the citizens of Edmonton and the police officials from the Atlantic to the Pacific who got to know him through his election as president of the Chief Constables' Association of Canada several years ago, Chief Blackwood stated.

Chief Blackwood remarked that he had noticed on many occasions that the holding of the major rank in a police force was not always a "bed of roses" but the retired chief

THE QUESTION

Is the false optimism of the people militating against the war effort of the United Nations?

THE ANSWERS

FRED JENNINGS, carpenter: There is a tendency to allay fears and to preach complacency. I would not like to say that this is working against the war effort, but it does not work for it. When people are lulled into a false sense of security or optimism, they are more inclined to relax their efforts, whether consciously or unconsciously. There is no doubt that nothing must be left undone to continue the unremitting Allied war effort.

TOM STINSON, salesman: The people of the free countries do not want to be misled as to the critical nature of the war situation. They have shown they can absorb punishment and bad news. Unfortunately, from official quarters, there has sometimes come reassuring statements that were not substantiated by events then taking place.

BARNEY THORBURN, clerk: Real optimism is an asset, but false optimism is something that should be shunned. Few people now really believe that the west coast is not menaced nor the Japanese infiltration of the Aleutians is a side-show effort to save face for reverses elsewhere. When the coast is shelled and the infiltration is not stopped, there is little upon which to base false optimism. The sooner an all-out effort is made in all directions, the sooner the war will be won.

Holiday Asked City Employers For Exhibition

Employers in the city of Edmonton were asked, in a resolution passed at a special meeting of the city council Wednesday night, to grant a half holiday to all employees on Citizens' Day, Wednesday, July 15, to enable them to attend the Edmonton Exhibition Association's summer fair. The resolution carried the rider that the holiday should not be granted if the cessation of work in any way impeded the nation's war effort.

The motion moved by Ald. James H. Ogilvie was passed by an eight to three majority. Mayor John W. Fry, and Aldermen Mrs. J. A. Clarke and Guy Patterson voted against the motion.

Mayor Fry said he had placed this question on the agenda as, under present conditions, he did not feel he should take the responsibility for asking employers to declare Wednesday next a half holiday.

OPPOSED FAIR

He added that for years it has been the custom to ask employers to declare Citizens' Day a half holiday. He said he had opposed the holding of an exhibition this year.

Ald. Patterson said council should go carefully on this matter. Un-

Getting Around
with Jack DeLong

Adam was the original isolationist. But he didn't get away with it for long, even at that early date. For it was adjudged that:

"It is not good that man should be alone," so an helpmate was created.

Ever since, man has been either trying to hide out on the turmoil and troubles of the world or has waded in in the thick of things no matter whether the going was smooth or rough.

In olden days when travel was slow and communications near great distances were impossible, except afoot or on the back of a domesticated animal, isolation often had the merit of greater safety.

But every technical advance has made isolation less of a workable reality although it may still have many adherents as a theoretical ideology.

And despite the fact that isolationism is just about as dead as the celebrated dodo bird in an

Because of wartime restrictions on gasoline and rubber, the annual summer picnic of the Pioneers' and Old Timers' Association will not be held this year, A. J. Ottewell, president of the association, said Wednesday. The picnic has been held at Lakeview each year by the old timers who came to the Canadian west before 1896, and their families.

Schools Enlarged

Capt. W. R. "Wop" May, O. B. E., D. F. C., famed northern flier and First Great War ace, who is supervisor for western Canada of training schools operated by Canadian Airways Training Ltd., under the British Commonwealth Air Traning Plan. Expansion of facilities at No. 2 Air Observers' School here are being made. Capt. May announced Thursday appointment of G. H. Finland, formerly of the Consolidated Flying Co., as assistant general manager of No. 2 A.O.S.

Air Observer School Here Will Expand

Expansion of facilities and increase in the student personnel at No. 2 Air Observers School in Edmonton will result from the general expansion of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan as announced by the headquarters of Air Minister Power at Ottawa Thursday.

The air observers school here, under the management of Capt. "Wop" May, O.B.E., will be increased in size, permitting of many more students than have been trained here previously.

At the same time the No. 16 Elementary Flying Training School, formerly operated as an R.A.F. training station, will be greatly enlarged.

The changes are made as a result of decisions made at the recent air training conference at Ottawa, which will bring a great increase in the numbers trained for service in the air forces of the United Nations in Canada, it is claimed.

Other changes are as follows:

At Malton, Ont., airport, expansion of the air observer school will necessitate closing down of the elementary flying training school and the operating company of the latter school will take over management of the Royal Air Force E.F.T.S. at De Winton.

At Regina the E.F.T.S. will be greatly enlarged and the A.O.S. at Regina will be moved to Pearce, Alta.

At Pearce the existing R.A.F. E.F. T.S. will be disbanded, "experience having shown that air conditions at Pearce are more suitable for the operation of heavy type aircraft than elementary trainers."

Wife's One-Time Pal Is Worry To Husband

Man Is a Cad Who Would Break Up Smooth-Running Home; But Woman Playing Dangerous Game By Flirting With Former Sweetheart

Dear Miss Dix—My wife and I have been married ten years. We are well mated in every way. We have three lovely children. I have a better than average job and we have been very happy. When I married my wife I rather rushed her off of her feet because I knew at the time that she had been in love with another man but she told me before we were married that this boy meant nothing to her and that all of the old feeling was gone.

Dorothy Dix

Now, after ten years, this old boy-friend suddenly turns up, and enters into the picture. He has been coming to see my wife and writing her letters. I have seen some of these letters. They are merely friendly, but in between the lines I read that he loves her, but I don't know how she feels towards him. I am afraid that I made a mistake in separating them and that I have spoiled her life, for while I can give her a home and security, I can't give her the thing she wants most.

I have been offered a position that would take me out of the country. Maybe if I accepted it and went away I would get rid of the feeling that my wife is only tolerating me because of the children. Miss Dix, you are a woman, do you think that if she did not love this man that he would continue to carry on this correspondence with him when she knows how unhappy it makes me?

A JEALOUS HUSBAND.

Answer—The one perfect man in the world is always the one a woman didn't marry. He is the one who never has any faults or ways that a wife has to put up with, and that is why a woman can idealize an old sweetheart into being the paragon of her life, even if she said "no" to him when he popped the question to her.

I get hundreds of letters from women who have been married long enough to have grown children who write me that they have suddenly discovered, when they are middle-aged women, that after all they are not in love with their husbands, but are in love with some girlhood sweetheart whom they haven't seen for twenty years, and who ask what must they do about it. I am going to advise them to go at once and take a look at the ex-boy-friend because there is no experience in the world's more disillusioning than to meet again your first sweetheart.

D.M.

A POSSIBLE CURE

I think, perhaps, your idea of going away for a little while and letting your wife get a closeup on her old sweetheart may be the best way to cure her of thinking that she is still in love with him. After all of these years she won't find that she has much in common with him, and when she compares him with you and remembers your kindness and devotion to her, she will realize that she cares more for you than she ever thought she did.

That is one view of the matter. Another is that she may just be having a little flirtation with him to prove to herself that she hasn't lost her allure and can still be attractive to men. But she is playing a dangerous game and one that is likely to lose her her good name, a good husband, and end in having her children taken away from her.

As for the man, he is doing an unspeakably caddish thing in trying to break up a marriage that was going along smoothly and comfortably. If he really loved your wife, when he found her happily married and with three children, he would simply have effaced himself. That would have been the point of view of an unselfish lover and a gentleman.

BOY IS NO TORCH-BEARER

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a girl of eighteen and have been dating a boy of twenty for two years, but I have no way of knowing whether or not he loves me. He has never told me that he loved me except in a roundabout way. He has said that he thinks I am a very nice girl and the kind of a girl that a man would some day want to marry. He does not believe in petting. I realize he is not the romantic type and has curious ideas. But why doesn't he tell me how he feels?

Do you think he is in love with someone else, or is this just his way of carrying on a love affair?

CLARA

Answer: Well, if a boy can go with a girl for two years without ever mentioning the state of his affections, I should say that he was much of a torch-bearer, and I don't wonder that she doesn't know where she stands with him. As a general thing, when a man tells a woman what a good wife she will make for somebody else, it is his diplomatic way of serving notice on her that his attentions are without intention.

But, inasmuch as this lad is only twenty years old, it may merely indicate that he is not in a position to marry and that he is not certain of how he feels about you, anyway. His silence on the subject of his feelings towards you is no sign that he is in love with someone else.

Inasmuch, however, as he has you guessing, I think you are making a mistake to let him monopolize you. The best way to clarify his feelings would be to start going out with another boy.

CHANCE FOR HAPPINESS

DEAR MISS DIX: Is there chance for happiness in a marriage which is founded more upon friendship than upon the grand passion? My fiance is a grand person who is very dear to me and I know that no one else could ever take his place with me. I feel as if God intended us to go through life together, to stand side by side against hardships and to share joy and happiness together, but I do not thrill to every touch of his hand, or get jittery at the sound of his voice. Is the calm sort of love I feel for him enough to marry him?

D.M.

Answer; Perhaps you are not of the emotional type and no man would ever be able to sweep you off your feet. After all, the hectic love-making, as it is represented in novels and the cinema, can in the nature of things last but for a little while. We can't go on thrilling and palpitating indefinitely or running a temperature over anyone. We are bound to come down to earth and to dealing with those whom we marry as human beings instead of godlings and romantic heroes and heroines.

So I think you would be perfectly safe in marrying a man for whom you have respect and admiration and a calm affection. After all, every marriage that is a success settles down into a beautiful and lasting friendship.

DEAR MISS DIX: Some months are said to be lucky to be married in, while if you marry in other months you are sure to be unhappy. Is this true?

GERALDINE

Answer: Certainly not. The happiness of a marriage depends upon the kind of a person you marry, not upon the time of year.

Medical authorities now believe that bow legs are nearly always caused by the disease called rickets, and not by walking too early. One leading child specialist of New York says that "bow legs seldom or never come from a child's walking early of his own accord". Of course, a child should not be forced to walk before he wishes it. Rickets is a disease due to malnutrition, and it softens the bones.

Woman Is "Boss" Shirley Road Crew: Does Good Job

SHIRLEY, Mass., July 9.—(AP)—A gentle but energetic woman is the "boss" these days to 16 members of the Shirley road crew.

Described by associates as "a woman who is not afraid of work," Mrs. Edna E. Burrill, a former clerk of the town highway department, was named acting head of the division when the regular superintendent was granted leave to engage in war work.

Besides directing the road repair work of her crew, Mrs. Burrill finds time to take a graduate course at Fitchburg State Teachers' College.

Points For Parents

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

There is every moment a child begins to play with other children he is certain to come into conflict with them. There are things he wants to do. There are things the other children want to do. The two things he dislikes are the type of play and refuse to play unless his dictates are obeyed.

This is often the mother who bitterly resents these play situations when they work to the apparent disadvantage of her child. She resents it when other children snatch her darling's toys and she is angry when her submissive daughter gives up her bike to the neighbor's son who won't be dispossessed of it.

One must recognize that play is not entirely fair to all children unless it is supervised by some adult with the knowledge and authority to set the right pattern for it. The child in a Nursery School soon learns that he can have more fun and enjoy more toys if he takes his turn with them. If he has a toy and is playing with it no one will snatch it from him. But once he relinquishes it the toy belongs to the next child until he is through with it. Because the interest of children in any toy is fleeting such rules work no hardship on anyone.

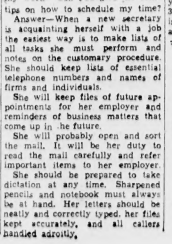

The mother who can remain impersonal and unemotional enough to supervise the children's play can suggest these good rules and thus start play off on the right foot. She must squelch any temptation to be partial to her own child or to consider that because the toys are his he has the right to dictate their use. If toys are to see their greatest usefulness they are to be used with playmates as well as for the child himself and he must learn to share them exactly as the other children are being taught to do.

The difficulty lies in the mother's recognition of her own child's unselfishness. She resents seeing him "give up" while the other child grabs. Yet the smaller child may have to pay a penalty to get playmates because his company may not be stimulating to them. He pays the penalty gladly by offering his toys as a reward for this companionship. It is his mother who resents it.

These experiences no child can escape. Everything he does and everything which happens to him increase his knowledge of how to get along with children and be happy with them. There is little question but that if he is required to be unselfish in one group he'll balance the experience by being selfish with another. It is better that he learn such tactics than that he play alone in solitary possession of all his toys.

Our leaflet, "Selfishness and Jealously," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

What To Do

I have just taken a secretarial position and feel very timid about my work. Can you give me some tips on how to schedule my time?

Answer—When a new secretary is acquainting herself with a job the easiest way is to make lists of all tasks she must perform and notes on the customary procedure. She should keep lists of essential telephone numbers and names of firms and individuals.

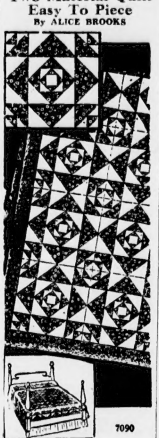

She will keep files of future appointments for her employer and reminders of business matters that come up in the future.

She will probably open and sort the mail. It will be her duty to read the mail carefully and refer important items to her employer.

She should be prepared to take dictation at any time. Sharpened pencils and notebook must always be at hand. Her letters should be neatly and correctly typed, her files kept accurately, and all callers handled agreeably.

A thin person is usually as anxious to gain weight as a stout person is to reduce. The fat person usually thinks he is beset with difficulties when he tries to reduce, but his problem is very small compared with the difficulty that a chronically thin person has in gaining weight. All that the fat person has to do in order to bring his weight to normal is to avoid the fat-forming foods and exercise more. The thin person on the other hand cannot usually gain weight by eating fat-forming foods and exercising less.

You may have noticed that all very thin people are very much of the same type that is, they have long, narrow lungs, narrow waists, and often protruding lower abdomens. They also have a tendency to waste a great deal of nervous energy through worry and fretting. In examining a thin person under the x-ray, the reason for the thinness is usually apparent. It will be found that the stomach is prolapsed very far down in the abdomen and the outlet of the stomach is considerably higher than the main part. The transverse colon will also be found from four to five inches below its normal position. The effect of this malposition of the digestive organs is to greatly retard the digestion and assimilation of food. Before the thin person can gain weight he really must change his type to some extent. He must cultivate a wider chest and strong abdominal muscles through using deep breathing and corrective exercises for overcoming any diseases which may be contributing to his lack of weight and without correcting the position of the abdominal organs.

A thin person may be diligent training develop a beautiful, graceful body, but he should never expect to become large and bulky. I am frequently asked the question: "What shall I do to gain weight?" I usually reply, "I would advise you to try to regain your health rather than strive to gain weight." You can become healthy and gain a normal weight for your type if you are willing to live a healthful life with healthful habits. You should be satisfied with an appearance of health, strength, and vitality without the desire for mere bulk and fat. The scales are not a reliable measure of health and do not be alarmed if your weight does not tally with your height according to average measurement charts.

The thin person should train his mind to be poised, avoiding all thoughts of fear, criticism, and intolerance as these mental conditions will do more than anything else to prevent one from gaining. Eat only wholesome food which will be converted into tissue and do not attempt to increase your weight by any stuffing process which might only result in such symptoms as biliousness, liver and gall bladder trouble, autointoxication and numerous diseases of the digestive organs.

All questions regarding Health and Diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 300 words. Address McCoy Health Service, 1151 West 6th St., Los Angeles, Calif.

FABRIC HATS

Cool, lightweight fabric hats belong in the business man's wardrobe this season; they're becoming, available for less or for the sportsman. This year in hat departments he'll find models especially designed for town and street wear, tailored to different age groups and varied tastes, from conservative to dramatic types in the mode. Fabrics excellent—beige, white, rust, natural, brown and green—with matching or contrasting bandings. Important to note about these is their special finish, which gives the fabrics a soft, supple drape and makes them resistant to dust, showers and non-oily spots and stains, yet does not prevent free air circulation.

Housewives: Guard Your Household Equipment

By MRS GAYNOR MADDOX

Just as men in the army must keep their guns, tanks and planes in fighting order, so women on the domestic front must care for their household equipment.

With materials curtailed and only limited supplies of metals allowed for repairs, care of the kitchen range becomes most important.

Be careful when using acid fruits and vegetables, sour milk, and vinegar near your range top. If you spill any of these, wipe them up quickly before the acid can eat away the top finish of the porcelain enamel.

Give your range a quick "once-over" after each use with soft paper or a dry cloth. If necessary, you can use a cloth dipped in hot water and wrung nearly dry. Never wash porcelain enamel surfaces with cold water while the range is still hot. The sudden change in temperature may crack the enamel.

When the stove has cooled, use warm, soapy water for all surfaces and racks. If a spot is hard to remove, rub it gently with a fine cleaning powder that will not scratch. If this doesn't work, rub lightly with fine steel wool, 00 grade, but never scrape.

Wash removable pans as you would any cooking utensil of the same material. Wash or wipe off drip trays often—once a day is not too much. Clean the broiler compartment after each use. Wash bright metal trimming on your stove with soap and water and polish with a soft, dry cloth. Do not use metal polish of any kind on nickel or chromium plated trim.

Tomorrow's Menu

Breakfast: Orange juice, fried scrapple, enriched toast, preserves, coffee, milk.

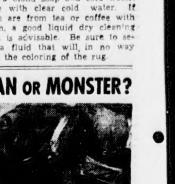

Luncheon: Eggplant with Spanish sauce, enriched bread and butter, sliced peaches, vanilla wafers, iced tea, milk.

Dinner: Tomato juice, beefsteak and kidney pie, baked potatoes, buttered onions, bread and butter, fruit cup, coffee, milk.

BEVERAGE STAINS

To remove clear tea or coffee stains from rugs, simply wash off with a bland soap and cold water. Rinse with clear cold water. If stains are from tea or coffee with cream, a good liquid dry cleaning agent is advisable. Be sure to select a fluid that will, in no way harm the coloring of the rug.

MAN OR MONSTER?

NO, this isn't a man from Mars! He's a Canadian shipyard worker, welding the vital parts of a trim Corvette . . . adding striking power to Canada's fighting navy. Tough work—yes! Work that needs the sort of health good eating brings. No wonder he says: "A morning bowl of Kellogg's Corn Flakes, with milk and sugar, helps me sail through the toughest days. It's the 'Self-Starter' breakfast." A breakfast with Kellogg's Corn Flakes will help you to stand the pace these hectic days. Get some Kellogg's today!

Rella Laing And Airman Are Married

Bouquets of peonies and carnations banked the fireplace in the South Side home of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Laing on Wednesday evening as the background for the ceremony at which their eldest daughter Rella Pearl, became the bride of LAC. Myron C. Rodehorst, R.C.A.F., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Rodehorst, of Red Deer, Alta. The Rev. Peter Fahrer, of Strathcona Presbyterian Church, officiated.

To the strains of a wedding march played by Miss Isobel McGruther, the bride approached on the arm of her father. Her afternoon frock of Elizabeth blue sheer, was designed on princess lines, with flaring skirt. Peter Pan collar and short sleeves. Her pert flower model hat was accented with a tiny rose veil, and her accessories were in crisp white. A bouquet of carnations and roses completed her ensemble.

Miss Jean Laing was her sister's only attendant. She wore an afternoon frock of dove rose sheer, a flower hat and beige accessories. Her flowers were carnations.

Mr. Ted Rodehorst was his brother's best man.

RECEPTION TO 30

After the ceremony, a reception to about 30 relatives and immediate friends was held. The bride's table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake and graced with silver candles and carnations. A toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Fisher.

After a wedding trip to Red Deer, the couple will go to Trenton, where temporarily they will make their home.

Travelling, the bride wore a slate blue tailleur, dusty rose blouse and rose accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Rodehorst, parents of the bridegroom, were guests at the ceremony.

Present Ban On Embroidery Causes Concern

By ALAN RANDAL

LONDON, July 9.—(CP)—The government's wartime ban on embroidery—part of the whole movement toward austere clothing—is causing concern amongst women. They say embroidery actually is an aid to morale. The subject may even come up in the House of Commons.

The embroidery association feels the board of trade should lift the ban on embroidery on all utility garments and thus allay fears the embroidery industry will collapse entirely.

Further, Chairman Phipps of the association says, "A little embroidery would stimulate the average workingwoman in her war effort."

MAIN CONCERN

The main concern is for Buckinghamshire cottage workers. Many of these women in Buckinghamshire which is famous for its embroidery supplement their old-age pension by doing a few hours' embroidery work each day but they lose this source of income as a result of the government ban.

Decision to send boxes of provisions, baking, candies, cigarettes and other extras to men of the Merchant Marine in hospital in Halifax was reached at a recent meeting of the Prince Edward of Kent Chapter, I.O.D.E. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. Norrington and Mrs. R. B. Clifton, regent, presided.

Mrs. G. V. H. Rocke, convener of navy work for the chapter, told of the men ill in Halifax, and it was through her suggestion, that the action was taken.

Social convener, Mrs. Donald D. McGarvey, reported $70 raised at the chapter's annual flannel dance held recently. Miss Flora May, convener of tickets for the "Bungalow", reported the chapter ahead of all other city chapters in ticket sales.

PAINTED FLOORS

To keep painted or stained floors in good condition, they may be given occasional light cleanings with mild soap and water. Do, of course, use light strokes and as little water as possible. Then wipe off with a cloth wrung out of clear water. A coating of wax well rubbed down over painted or stained floors gives a hard, glossy finish that is easily cleaned.

FINGERMARKS

To remove dirty or greasy fingermarks from your fine mahogany furniture, wipe off with a soft cloth wrung until just damp in cool soapy water, dry with a soft clean dry cloth, wiping in the direction of the grain of the wood.

Recruits Work In Hospital, Control Tower

By MARGARET ECKER

BRANTFORD, Ont., July 9.—(CP)—It's too bad the girls of the Royal Canadian Air Force (Women's Division) here are so healthy—the hospital is so nice and cheery. It has soft green walls and gay orange curtains, no hospital smells, but nice, restful air.

But on the day a Canadian Press reporter visited No. 3 Service Flying Training School there wasn't a single airwoman customer for Nursing Sister Elaine Matheson of Southampton, Ont., or Nursing Sister Pauline Brown of Granby, Que. The station's airwomen have a three-bed ward in the hospital but it doesn't have many occupants.

"This is a well station," said Nurse Brown. "The girls live a healthy life, they're out-of-doors most of the time, they eat healthy food, they get plenty of sleep and exercise".

Sore feet is one of the few complaints, and there are occasional colds. Life at Brantford, as at most air stations, is almost too healthy—many of the girls complain about a gain in weight.

HOSPITAL ORDERIES

Airwomen aren't merely patients in the hospital. "W.D." hospital assistants have taken over the work airmen orderlies used to do. They are better in the wards than men, said Nurse Matheson. "They're more interested in making the patients comfortable and the men like them, too. They are usually smiling and cheerful, and they've showed the stuff they're made of in the crash ward which is always ready for any emergency."

If the girls at Brantford are healthy, it's not because they don't work hard. And from a look into the big, spotless kitchen the sore feet aren't hard to understand. The airwomen cooks and messwomen travel at a good clip as they set tables, work at the steam tables and supervise the food preparation.

Airwoman Winnifred Kenyon of Brantford has just made a whole batch of meat balls and was busily icing the large black pans into the oven. She stopped long enough to say she liked her job and that she did the rest of the staff, who were too busy to stop to talk.

CONTROL TOWER

Airwomen wouldn't trade places for anything, but some of the girls think the control tower is a more exciting place to work. In the office overlooking the landing fields where bombers were taking off and landing every minute, AW2 Diana Beddow, whose home is in India, was keeping track of flying hours and adding up the air hours of the student pilots.

Beddow left India in December with the hope she'd be able to get into uniform. As soon as she got to Montreal she enlisted.

AW. Pat Eaton of Vancouver also works in the control tower operating room. It makes her a bit wistful. "Makes me want to fly," she said.

Up a steep ladder in the tower itself, AW. Martha Frame of Winnipeg keeps her eyes on the weather. She enlisted as a general duties worker but was shifted into meteorological work and now it is her job to plot weather maps and operate the communication teletype.

Across the hangar full of bombing planes AW. Ethel Salidas of North Bay, Ont., was doing another type of job. Salidas was working in equipment stores. She put plenty of vigor into her work. She was born in Canada but most of her relatives are in Greece and haven't been heard from since the invasion.

A group of girls came into the snack bar for tea between shifts. Corporal Doreen Marsh of Port Credit, Ont.; AW2. Dorothy Veiten, a graduate of the University of Toronto who gave up a job as occupational therapist to become an equipment assistant; AW. Ellen Goulden, also a Toronto girl, who packs parachutes; AW. Winnifred Flack of Long Branch, Ont., another equipment girl, and AW. Phyllis Sandham who left the University of Toronto to become an R.C.A.F. dental assistant.

"Honey," the exuberant mongrel pup mascot of the W.D.'s galloped into the recreational centre with AW. Eileen St. Martin who, before the death of her pilot husband in a plane crash, ran the business end of a northern Quebec air freight service.

U. Of A. Grads Are Married In Calgary

Of interest to friends in University of Alberta circles is the wedding in St. Stephen's church, Calgary, Wednesday afternoon, of Betty Baptiste, daughter of Lt.-Col. and Mrs. A. C. Cooper Johnston of Calgary, to Dr. Ralph Edward Fisher, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Fisher, also of that city. For the ceremony, at which the Rev. W. E. Jackson officiated, the church was fragrant with white peonies and carnations.

Both the bride and bridegroom are well-known on Edmonton and both are graduates of the University. The bride was graduated in 1941 with her Bachelor of Arts degree and since that time has been principal of Hay Lakes school. During her university years she became affiliated with Pi Beta Phi fraternity.

Dr. Fisher was graduated this year with his doctor's degree. During his undergraduate years he was active in the affairs of the Outdoor Club, and for many years was university skiing instructor. Since his graduation in March he has been practising at Jasper.

For her wedding the bride wore floor-length frock of white brocaded organza, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, and a bouffant skirt slightly en train. Her court length veil was caught to her head with a wreath of swansonia and she carried a colonial bouquet of roses, forget-me-nots and swansonia.

Canadian 'Wrens' To Be Trained In Luxurious Ottawa Mansion

Spacious Grounds, Lovely Home to House First Class Of Trainees Scheduled to Begin Course in Capital City Early in August

By MARGARET ECKER

OTTAWA, July 8—(CP)—There's nothing nautical about a big lowered 20-roomed Elizabethan house on Laurier avenue in Ottawa, but early in August, according to plan, the building—onetime Anbrose O'Brien mansion—will become No. 1 W.R.C.N.S. training centre for Wrens.

The school will be in surroundings to which most Canadian girls would like to have been accustomed. There are spacious grounds where the girls can stroll or rest in off duty hours. There are terrace-like verandahs framed by green hop vines.

Women naval officers will probably use the big double parlor with its ceiling-high windows. Navy ratings should taste like filet mignon in the oak-panelled dining room with its huge fireplace.

There's kitchen space to feed a ship's company behind the dining room and a white suite of washing rooms, cupboards, serving rooms, butlers' pantries and servants' quarters.

MAZE OF ROOMS

Upstairs is a maze of rooms, bathrooms and cupboards. It will take some planning to make these shipshape. But bath night will be a glamorous occasion. Of the seven bathrooms on the two top floors, only one or two are mundane white porcelain. The rest are exotic creations in lavender, green, yellow and a deep blue not far from Wren blue.

Original plans called for the Wrens to be in training by the end of July, but it is expected that several weeks will elapse before the first class of 50 or so will begin training. This first group will be given a few weeks rigorous preliminary training and from its ranks will come the future officers of the Wrens in Canada.

Military Highway Completed Across North Australia

SYDNEY, July 9.—(AAP)—A highway capable of maintaining heavy military traffic has been built across the trackless northern territory of Australia in a little more than a year, the Sidney Herald's war correspondent reported yesterday. A year ago there were only a few two-wheel tracks meandering through the grassy plains. Today there is a smooth highway, so designed that army vehicles will not be halted when the rainy season arrives.

June Brought Heavier Raids Against Nazis

LONDON, July 9—(CP)—Weather conditions throughout June were mostly favorable for continuing the bombing offensive of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. than during May, and the bomber command operated against Germany and occupied territory on 13 days and 20 nights, while the air forces as a whole operated 26 days and 23 nights.

Bombers carried but 16 attacks against five military and industrial targets in Germany; five of them against the Ruhr, four against Bremen, two against Essen and one on Osnabruck.

The 1,000-bomber attack which took place against Cologne May 30-31 was followed by a 1,000-bomber raid against the Ruhr June 1-2, while another 1,000-bomber raid on Bremen was carried out June 25-26. The force dispatched for these two principal attacks included Lancasters, Manchesters, Stirlings and Halifaxes, while aircraft fighter and army co-operation commands in conjunction with bombers carried out diversionary attacks on German airdromes.

The attack on the Ruhr on the night of June 1-2 was hampered by cloud and industrial haze, but was so severe the fires reflected on the sheet of cloud over the Ruhr were visible from the coast. Essen was the chief target, but damage was inflicted throughout the Ruhr on densely-populated manufacturing towns, coal mines and iron and steel works.

DAMAGE INCREASED

The attack on Bremen on the night of June 25-26 was also hindered by adverse weather. In spite of this, the damage already caused by previous attacks was considerably increased. Bremen is the second largest port in Germany and an industrial centre. Emden suffered severe damage in raids on its port. The Norddeworerke ship-building yards were damaged, as were the dock area and the main railway engineering.

In occupied territory 33 attacks were carried out against 17 targets. Among the objectives were docks and harbor installations, power stations and railway communications. Five were against Dieppe, four against Le Havre, three each against Lannion, Maupertuis and Dunkirk, two against Bruges, while Abbeville, Berck, Boulogne, Calais, Cherbourg, Flushing, Hazebrouck, Le Treport, Morlaix and Ostend also were attacked. Twelve of these attacks were during the day by Boston aircraft of the Bomber command, with fighter escorts, chiefly on coastal areas stretching from Flushing in the east to Cherbourg, Morlaix and Lannion in the west. Numerous large scale sweeps also have been carried out by fighter aircraft and bomb-carrying Hurricanes of the fighter command.

TRANSPORT DIFFICULTIES

Objectives have included docks, railways and marshalling yards and industrial targets. Several locomotives have been destroyed by day and night and freight trains set on fire. This will increase the enemy's transport difficulties. The sweeps have been on an increased scale, including a number of 300-fighter sweeps. In addition air dromes in occupied territory were attacked 34 times by night; and sea mining was carried out on five occasions on nights when other operations were impracticable.

One noteworthy feature was the flight of a Beaufighter coastal command plane over Paris, June 12. At midday this aircraft flew at roof-top height up and down the Champs Elysees. As a tribute to Free France, a tricolor was dropped as near as possible to the tomb of the unknown soldier which lies under the Arc De Triomphe.

German aircraft flew over Britain 22 nights during June, seldom penetrating far inland. There was slight daylight activity on 16 occasions, chiefly on coastal districts Norwich, Southampton and Weston-Super-Mare each sustained short attacks, but the German effort against this country was in no way comparable with the heavy attacks carried out by the R.A.F. and R.C. A.F.

In all offensive operations against the enemy, 100 enemy aircraft were destroyed, of which 35 were destroyed over Britain and 65 over Europe. In carrying out offensive operations against German and the occupied territory the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. lost a total of 271 aircraft, of which none was lost over Britain.

4 Airmen Killed In Midair Crash

CALGARY, July 9—(CP)—Four airmen, two of them from Calgary, were instantly killed when two Cessna Crane aircraft of a three-plane formation collided in midair and crashed 17 miles east of Carmangay yesterday. The men were the entire crews of the planes which were from No. 15 S.F.T.S., Claresholm.

LAC. Claude McDonald Stearns, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stearns, Calgary, and LAC. Ernest Edward Guttridge, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Guttridge, Calgary, were the Calgary fliers killed. Names of the other two are being withheld pending notification of next-of-kin, according to Wing Commander W. E. Kenneey, commanding officer of the school.

Ordnance Officer

Lt.-Col. Walter McInnis, Regina, has arrived in Edmonton to take command of an ordnance formation in the city.

He recently returned from overseas where he commanded the Ordnance Field Parks, and was later transferred to the 2nd Canadian Motor Transport Depot on his promotion from Major to Lieutenant-Colonel.

The Italian harbor of Taranto was built by the British during the First Great War.

LONDON, July 9.—(CP) — Sir Stafford Cripps announced today that a debate on the shipping situation will be held in secret during the next series of sittings of the House of Commons.

Sir Stafford, leader of the house, said the government's secrecy in the matter of sinkings was not intended to conceal distasteful facts but to "protect the food and lives of our people, and of our seamen in particular."

The debate on the third day of the sittings, following a debate on production scheduled for the first two days.

Former Fiancee At Nazis' Trial

WASHINGTON, July 9—(AP)—Herbert Hans Hapt, one of the eight would-be saboteurs from Germany on trial for their lives, yesterday heard a former fiancee, who jilted him when his true character was revealed, testify against him—presumably to his erstwhile activities as a free American citizen with a yen for helping Hitler.

The witness was Mrs. Gerard Melind, 24-year-old Chicago divorcee, a bright figure in her white suit, flowered blouse and white turban against a drab setting of barricaded corridors, uniformed judges and heavily-armed guards.

From the fact that she was on the stand—one of the few to seep from the highly secret proceedings—it was possible to speculate that the prosecution was tracing the earlier background of the defendants before taking up the recital of their recent activities.

Calgarian Named Vice-President Of Alberta Liberals

CALGARY, July 9.—(CP)—Harold W. Riley, Jr., Calgary, was unanimously elected vice-president of the Alberta Liberal Association at a meeting of the executive here yesterday. Thirty members of the executive from various parts of the province attended the meeting. Mr. Riley replaces Judge C. J. Ford, a recent appointment to the district court bench.

The executive decided upon an enlargement with the addition of 20 members, to be chosen from the provincial ridings. A statement issued to the press the executive reported a lengthy discussion of problems of agriculture and other factors affecting the residents of the province. It was recommended that a survey be taken of existing conditions in each constituency throughout Alberta.

Edmonton Pilot Sees Action Over Frisian Islands

LONDON, July 9.—(CP)—One of a group of Canadians with an R.A.F. Lancaster Squadron, Flt.-Sgt Johnny Chiasson of Glace Bay, N.S. secured a probable on an ME-109-F near the Frisian Islands. "I gave him several good bursts, and another member of the crew saw him twisting down to the sea, but we didn't see him hit the deck so could only claim a probable," he said. The Nazi shot away part of the Lancaster's tail and dusted Chiasson's turret. Chiasson's pilot was PO. John Speir of Brussels, Ont.

Other Canadians with the squadron are PO.s J. D. Waterson, Vancouver, and D. J. Quinlan, Edmonton.

Fatal Crash

NORRISTOWN, Pa., July 9. — (AP)—Eight persons were killed yesterday, and more than a score injured, many critically, in the collision of an interurban passenger trolley car and an express freight car.

Murder in Ferry Command

Don't Miss A Chapter In This Exciting Story Of Bombers For Britain

CHAPTER I

IN the bleak Newfoundland predawn, swirling snow slashed and bit at the huddled group of official witnesses awaiting the execution of Lemoy Statler. It was the morning of December 6, 1941.

Over the rim of the high stone fence surrounding the penitentiary jail yard, the witnesses could see the lightening outline of Quidividi Lake.

To their rear, house lights were winking into the murkiness to join the lonely street lamps of St. John's. From the Atlantic wastes three miles to the east moaned a melancholy, salty wind.

"Dammit!" snapped one of the shivering figures. "Why don't they bring him out and get it over with?"

"Aw relax!" rasped another. "If the poor beggar isn't in a hurry why should we be?"

The door into the jail yard opened. Framed in the light was a uniformed man with a broom. He half ran to the portable scaffold erected close to the jail wall and hurriedly began sweeping the steps leading up to the trap door.

"Very thoughtful," commented a witness. "It would be tough if Statler slipped and sprained an ankle on his way up. . . ."

Sudden silence fell as a group of dark figures surrounding a coatless man with opened collar appeared in the doorway. The swishing of the broom on the scaffold steps took on an exaggerated sound.

Quickly the procession was formed outside the door. The jail chaplain was praying in a low, flat monotone. Tall members of the Newfoundland Constabulary fell in on either side of the condemned man. Immediately behind him was a plumpish, red-faced man wearing a cap—a Canadian hangman imported for Newfoundland's first hanging in decades. Three officials completed the procession.

As they mounted the steps, two muffled figures stepped through the door and stood in the shadow of the scaffold. As one held up a match to the other's cigaret, their faces were revealed in the flare. One was a distinguished-looking, white-haired man in his sixties, the other a bronzed, handsome man in his middle thirties.

"Ghastly business, Dawson," the first one growled. "Wish the plane from England had been delayed. This would have been something I'd rather have missed. You chaps in the Intelligence Department get hardened, I suppose, but. . . ."

"But never that hard, Sir Frederick," interrupted Clyde Dawson. "In fact, this business hurts me more than you can imagine. You see. . . ." he paused for a second, "I actually grew very attached to Lemoy Statler and cursed the necessity of seeing him killed off—"

He halted abruptly and pointed to the scaffold. In the eerie light of a single electric floodlamp the hangman was strapping the condemned man's feet together. Quickly he followed with the hood and slipped the noose carefully into position—knot directly under the left ear.

Through the hood, clearly and without a trace of faltering, came the condemned man's voice:

". . . as we forgive those who trespass against . . ."

In one fast motion the hangman's hand swept back to the lever and the trap door clanged open. Lemoy Statler's body hit the end of the rope with a jerking thud.

You could almost hear the snowflakes fall.

Two of the witnesses, evidently doctors, walked toward the body, tugging stethoscopes from their pockets.

Clyde Dawson turned to the door. Sir Frederick Lemsborough, governor of Newfoundland, followed him. In the chief jailer's office they shook hands with an American colonel.

"The colonel worked on the investigation with the Newfoundland constabulary and myself," explained Dawson. "You see, one of the murdered men was an American soldier."

Sir Frederick nodded:

"Yes, I know that—most unfortunate."

"Well, sir," Dawson said, "the case was clear cut. Lemoy Statler was caught red-handed by a constable as he dashed out of a speakeasy early one morning last September. A woman's scream—she ran the speakeasy—prompted the constable to hold Statler. In his pocket was a still-smoking revolver, and a good supply of money in a wallet stamped with the name of Capt. Gilbert Cathcart.

"Cathcart was found upstairs, shot through the head. With him, also dead, was an American soldier. Investigation revealed they had both been killed by Statler's gun.

"We found that Statler had apparently gone to much trouble to cultivate Cathcart's friendship at the Newfoundland Hotel. Cathcart was drinking heavily as the autopsy revealed and, while Statler had also appeared badly intoxicated, a test made immediately at Police Headquarters showed he had been feigning drunkenness, obviously for the purpose of winning Cathcart's confidence.

"The woman speakeasy keeper testified she heard Cathcart yell: 'You dirty thief, I'll . . .' then came the gun shots. We don't know how the American soldier fitted in but have every reason to believe the poor chap just happened to be on the scene and stopped a bullet.

"Statler's passport was found to be a phony, as was his registration card. He had no police record but refused to give the minutest hint of his identity. In fact, he didn't even take the stand.

"And I must explain something else—would you mind leaving us for a moment, Chief?" Dawson smiled an apology to the chief jailer and waited for the door to close. "There is a story behind the story. What we have told you was what the jury heard. The rest we suppressed for reasons which, we feel confident, you will approve."

Sir Frederick's eyebrows lifted.

"In the wallet, besides the money . . ." Dawson's words fell slowly and methodically, "was a large quantity of data of the most secret technical nature pertaining to the Royal Air Force Ferry Command Service . . ."

"What!" cut in the governor.

"Yes, most vital data. Captain Cathcart was an important civilian technician of the Ferry Command.

"And Statler, you presume, an enemy agent?"

Dawson and the colonel nodded.

"There would seem every indication that such was the case. His personal baggage was telling us nothing of his identity, showed he was well off financially. And he was of the cosmopolitan best described as 'cosmopolitan.'

"Tell me," asked Sir Frederick, "how did he act at the last?"

"That's curious," Dawson commented, "The Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington was also interested in that point. Statler was icy nerves itself, I secured permission to sit out the night with him in the death cell in the hope that he would drop some clew. But he chatted breezily about everything but himself and the case. He refused the chaplain and would not even leave a letter for any relatives . . . by Jove, I forgot . . ."

The calm air of professional investigator abruptly dropped from Dawson. Excitedly he reached into an inside pocket and drew out a white envelope.

"Just two minutes before the death march," he explained tensely, "Statler handed me this with a wide grin on his face. He asked that I open it only after the 'show' and I was so edged up the incident had wiped my mind until this moment."

He had been running a penknife along one end of the envelope as he talked. Gingerly he squeezed it open and drew out its lone content—a colored snapshot.

Eagerly the three men bent over the table . . . staring up at them was a remarkably beautiful girl with black hair and a superb figure. She was dressed in neatly fitting sport slacks and leaning against a green boat.

"Strange," said the colonel, "she seems vaguely familiar—I've seen that face somewhere before."

Dawson had turned over the snapshot. Suddenly he laughed outright.

"I was thinking the same thing—the explanation is on the back in Statler's handwriting."

Again they bent over the snapshot.

"If you ever meet this girl just say the other half of the reunion date couldn't make it —unexpectedly tied up, you know. But he really missed her—and plenty. P. S. to Dawson: Don't get excited, old man, she is NOT Hedy Lamarr."

CHAPTER II

Afterwards Clyde Dawson wondered what prompted him to attend the formal inquest that followed the hanging. There was no apparent need for him as a member of the Canadian Intelligence Department to attend—in fact, he had plenty of reason not to go because in the pre-execution period he had developed a sincere liking for the condemned Lemoy Statler.

But the girl's snapshot with its humorous reference to Hedy Lamarr had left him restless. Blind alleys made him unhappy. Statler's death didn't remove the necessity of tracing backwards to possible spy ring connections. If he was involved with others they certainly followed the trial and saw no espionage was hinted. They would feel that Statler, true to the spy's code, had kept his indentity hidden even to death.

The coroner moved briskly through the formalities in the penitentiary library converted into a temporary morgue. The doctors made brief statements and the jury of witnesses passed a verdict of "death by legal execution." There was some discussion about the disposal of the body until Dawson announced that in the absence of relatives or friends he would see that the executed man was given a Christian burial.

That afternoon while having lunch at the Newfoundland hotel, Dawson was paged for a telephone call. It was the undertaker he had hired.

"Sorry to bother you, Mr. Dawson," he said, "but you told me to report anything unusual I may have found before removing the body to the graveyard. Well, there was only one thing—perhaps it is silly but . . ."

"Yes, yes, what is it?" cut in Dawson.

"Well, sir, in the heel of the dead man's right shoe between the sock and the flesh, was a piece of beefsteak."

"A piece of beefsteak?" exclaimed Dawson. "Was anything hidden in it?"

"Nothing that I could find. It was just a good piece of sirloin cut to the exact shape of his heel. Of course, it might be poisoned or . . ."

Dawson told the undertaker not to remove the body until he had further orders. Slowly he walked back to the dining room, his mind in utter confusion.

"There are more goofy twists to this case than a pretzel," he muttered to himself. "Now why would a condemned man hide a piece of beefsteak in the heel of his shoe?"

The chief jailer knew nothing about it but summoned the six guards who had been on duty twice on the Death Watch for eight-hour shifts. The answer to the riddle was almost ridiculously simple.

"This Statler fella hurt his heel walking in his stocking feet to the wash basin yesterday," one of the guards declared. "He stepped on a bit of plaster and caused what he called a heck of a bruise. It limped after that and then asked me to get him a little bit of raw steak about the size of his heel—said it was the only way to fix a heel hurt that way."

Dawson's eyes were beginning to sparkle.

"Any of you ever hear of that remedy before?"

The chief jailer and guards all shook their heads.

The investigator smiled broadly.

"That's because, gentlemen, you were never athletes. This has been a great help to me—thanks a million to you all."

Dawson actually felt cheerful as he phoned the American colonel. The first ray of light had poked through the mystery.

The colonel listened attentively to Dawson's request. Yes, the U. S. Army force had a physical instructor with them, a Sergt. Del Rose, formerly with some Illinois college—both all-round athlete and a topnotch instructor.

"Perfect," replied Dawson. "Do you think you could train him over to the penitentiary right away?"

Within an hour, Rose was in the chief jailer's office. Dawson seated him at the desk and explained the purpose of his request:

"If you aren't aquamish, sergeant, there's a job to be done here and I believe you are probably the only man in Newfoundland qualified to do it . . ." the sergeant smiled appreciation. "A few rooms down there lies the body of a man who was hanged this morning. I learned that he had bruised the bottom of his heel yesterday and ordered a piece of beefsteak to place against the flesh. That indicated to me that he had at some time taken part in maybe athletics, because it is a trick used only by topnotch trainers . . ."

The sergeant interrupted.

"Perfectly true, Mr. Dawson. I have met many doctors who didn't know that trick."

"Fine! Now, sergeant, here is the job. Could you examine that body and give me the benefit of your particular sport or sports he played in —judging solely from signs of any old injuries that may still be evident?"

The sergeant remained silent for a full minute before replying:

"I believe I could make a good stab at it.

"My initial observation would be that the man has all the exterior signs of a former athlete," said Rose, looking intently at the body. "That was a while back but not so very far—perhaps 10 to 15 years ago. He isn't flabby as non-athletic men of his size often are. Again, it is fairly obvious that his left shoulder had been broken at some time—it is larger than the right and of rather awkward shape."

Dawson pointed to an obvious suture marking on the dead man's right side.

"Yes, I noticed that," commented Rose. "It certainly isn't a post-operative incision. I'd say it was made by some knife-like point—say, like a hockey skate. There are also marks of blows around the mouth, deep ridges that have almost disappeared with the years. They are more likely hockey injuries than any other type."

Gingerly, he began moving his fingers through the executed man's hair.

"Here's something," he exclaimed, signaling for Dawson to look closely. "There is another suture marking—three stitches I would say. You'll notice the cut was also of the sharp type. Again I consider it a skate cut rather than a blow by something wider. A lacrosse stick, for instance, would be inclined to make a mashy wound.

"His ears aren't cauliflowered and the nerves are not unduly thick. Anyway, I'd say by his build that he wasn't a boxer or a wrestler—he was more inclined to the type of athlete . . . Aha! In running or skating sports . . . by the way, let's look at his fingers."

Each man picked up one of the stiffened hands and unclenched the fists—an extremely difficult task.

"Uh-huh," said Rose, "he played baseball all right—not "as much as a professional, perhaps, but quite a bit judging by one badly twisted finger knuckle and another partially twisted on his right hand."

"That's so," agreed the sergeant, "you notice the fingers on his left hand are intact because he must have worn the glove on this one. Now let's look at his hip . . . no doubt about it. Mr. Dawson, you see there is a patch of oddly colored skin on his left hip. That's the result of what we call 'strawberries' in baseball—bruised, torn patches of skin caused by sliding into bases."

"But his right hip doesn't seem discolored at all," commented Dawson.

The sergeant grinned. "You're a Canadian all right—don't know your inside baseball. A right-handed pitcher always slides on his left side to save his salary arm . . . get it?"

There were no suture marks on the fronts of the deceased's legs but they noted a slight one over the Achilles tendon at the rear of the ankle bone.

"Might have been done either by a skate or a baseball cleat," murmured the sergeant. "But . . ." he leaned over the right foot, "there is something positively definite. You see this suture marking along the inside of the foot? Well, that was almost 90 per cent certain to have been caused by a skate tip. It's a weak spot in the side of a skate boot and I've never heard of such a cut caused by a baseball cleat . . ."

Dawson cut in: "Okay, sergeant —now in what sports would you say Lemoy Statler specialized?"

The other's reply was immediate.

"Baseball and hockey beyond a doubt—and quite a bit of it. But I agree with you that he hasn't the appearance of injury marks of a man who had been through the professional mill. Was he an educated chap?"

"Very much so," answered Dawson. "I wouldn't be surprised if he had been a law student, because of his chance remarks about the trial.

"He was likely an athlete at some university," Dawson concluded, "where they play a lot of hockey and baseball. There can't be so many of them in Canada and the Northern States. If the department at Ottawa sends out circulars containing the photo of Statler taken after his arrest to all such universities and mentions that he was likely a prominent university athlete specializing in hockey and baseball about 10 or 15 years ago, there is an excellent chance that we'll learn his identity from one of them . . ."

Dawson turned to the undertaker. "Carry on with the funeral —and be sure to replace the piece of beefsteak on the heel I hope it helps poor Lemoy as much as it helped me!"

(To Be Continued)

A. W. O'Brien is a man who gets around, as this picture suggests. It was a Reuters "somewhere in the Atlantic" on Christmas Day of 1939, aboard a troopship en route to England with the First Canadian Division. As assistant editor of The Montreal Standard, Mr. O'Brien covers a "beat" that includes the United States and Canada, with side trips like the one above. His trip to England with the Canadian troops gave him the idea for his first NEA serial, "Murder in Convoy." Since then he has visited all of Canada's major army, navy and air bases several times, and has made two tours of Newfoundland. One result is this new story. It's authentic, exciting and different.

"This Statler fella hurt his heel on a bit of plaster and caused what he called a bone bruise," one of the guards declared. "He asked me to get him a bit of steak about the size of his heel—said it was the only way to fix it!"

As G-Man Meets Spies In Undercover Battle For Air Supremacy

Holiday Asked City Employers For Exhibition

ited Stalles factories, he said, had worked full blast through the July 4 holiday. He was of the opinion that it was much better to dig down into the city's offers and pay any deficit that might be incurred in the fair's operation rather than essential war work should stop for the afternoon.

Ald. C. E. Garlepy said the exhibition this year was a splendid one in fact, and it was the duty of all to see that it was an outstanding success.

Ald. Sidney Parsons drew council's attention to the fact that the Navy, Army and Air Force were co-operating with the Exhibition Association in the staging of many features at the fair. That being the case, he added, there can be no reason why employers, not engaged in essential war work, should not give their employees the half holiday.

Changes proposed by City Engineer A. W. Haddow in maintenance and construction schedules passed by the city council when considering estimates, made necessary by the Dominion Oil Controller limiting the supply of oil and asphalt products, were approved.

CONCRETE ROAD

Chief change was that instead of paving Rowland road with asphalt top a full concrete road will be built on the portions not completed when the material-limiting order was issued by the oil controller.

Approval was given also to the recommendation of the city engineer that total improvements fully petitioned for be advertised and proceeded with.

These improvements include concrete walks, grading, gravelling and curbing, plane walks, plane grading and gravelling, boulevard construction, and walks and crossings.

Commissioner R. J. Gibb reported to council that guards had been maintained at the city power plant since the outbreak of war, and that visitors were permitted to enter the plant only under the express permission of the plant superintendent.

This information was given following a query by Ald. H. D. Ainlay as to the precautions being taken at the power plant to prevent sabotage.

Commissioner Gibb said that the protection presently given was not full protection, but was adequate at present.

ASSESSMENT APPROVED

Formal resolution approving the 1942 business assessment roll was given by council, and the bylaw respecting the payment of the tax was passed.

This bylaw provided that the business tax due in 1942 shall become payable on September 1, and provided for the following scale of discounts or rebates.

A discount of 10 per cent on all amounts paid on or before September 1, and five per cent on amounts paid after that date, but on or before October 31. No discount or rebate will be allowed on amounts paid after October 31, and all taxes outstanding and unpaid after December 31 shall be subject to penalties at the rate of six per centum per annum until payment is effected.

The council approved the rebate of license fees offset in respect of a specified number of businesses. The motion dealt with a certain series of licenses that has been in effect for several years. No additions to the list was made.

An option to the Northwestern Utilities Ltd. for the purchase of two lots immediately adjoining the company's 104 street property was approved by council. The option is for a period of one year.

Approval was given by council to the appointment of Ald. James H. Ogilvie, Ald. Guy Patterson, K.C., and Alderman H. D. Ainlay as a special committee of the council to deal with the housing situation in Edmonton.

Council passed a resolution urging the senior government to increase the rates of pay given to trainees attending Industrial schools to enable them to meet the increased cost of living.

The motion resulted from a request made several months ago that these trainees be given half-fare privileges on the street railway system. Ald. Ainlay felt it was the duty of the senior government to pay the trainees sufficient to meet the cost of living, and also to meet their transportation to and from their training centres. The commissioners were instructed to consult with government officials on the possibility of increased wages being paid.

The council approved the recommendation of the nominating committee that R. H. Bellamy, former alderman, be appointed to the Town Planning Commission, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of George L. Parney.

On the motion of Ald. A. Bisset it was decided that the regular meeting of council, scheduled for next Monday evening, be cancelled to permit aldermen serving on Exhibition Association committees to perform their duties at the summer fair.

Recognition of the long and faithful service given by former Chief of Police G. Shute was given in a formal resolution moved by Ald. Sidney Parsons and seconded by Ald. F. J. Mitchell.

Bronx Fans Give Joe DiMaggio Real Ride These Days

NEW YORK, July 9—(AP)—In the Bronx, they are optimists at the Bronx cheer, and Joseph Paul Dimaggio is learning all the varieties this season, because the citizens are letting him have the entire list every time he pokes his head out of a dugout.

Joe is the first to admit that Dimaggio is having his worst season at bat since he arrived on the big league scene, but he figures there's nothing wrong with him that a base knock or two wouldn't cure. And what's more, he wouldn't be at all surprised if the three singles he whacked in the two All-Star games just concluded didn't indicate that he may be coming out of it.

If that's the case, and he starts to rattle the American League's pitchers again as he's done for half a dozen years, the Yankees' lean slugger expects the fans will stop making those noises at him, because they make his ears ring and other things.

"You can't blame 'em too much for booing," Joe said as he sat in the blackout after the American leaguers had whipped the Nationals Monday night, in the course of which he had nearly been blown off the field by the jeers every time the customers got a look at him.

"I felt good in there. I got those two hits, and I just topped another one, but the old swing was there when I went after it. A couple more like that and everything is going to be all right, I guess."

Ye followed up the first two pokes with a smash off rapid Robert Feller in the Cleveland game Tuesday night to drive in the American leaguers' first run. It could be that it's just as he says, and he's about ready to spring away from the lowly .260 mark around which he's been hovering all season.

But there is considerable eyebrow-raising around the league over his calm attitude toward the booing fans, especially on the heels of the way Ted Williams took the same treatment up in Boston a couple of weeks ago. Why, the first thing you know, Ted could hage Joe read right out of the union.

All-Star Service Game Success But Not To Be Repeated

CLEVELAND, July 9.—(AP)—Success was stamped on baseball's all-star service spectacle Wednesday as the major league representatives and army and navy players scattered, but there was a question in everyone's mind whether another such game would be staged again.

Alva Bradley, president of the Cleveland Indians and host to 62,094 fans Tuesday night at the Municipal stadium, said the Army Emergency Relief Fund and the Navy Relief Society would be able to divide approximately $70,000 from the game.

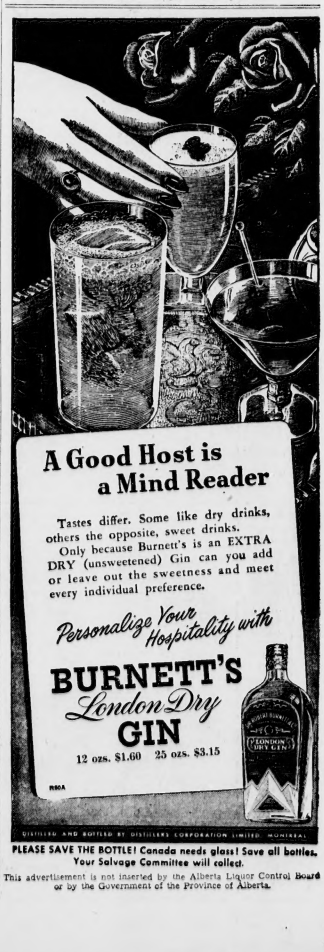

"It was great," he enthused to Lieut. Gordon (Mickey) Cochrane, pilot of the service stars and to others yesterday. "It was a tremendous task to put over, but we did it and we'd gladly try it again next year if we thought we could raise $70,000 for the army and navy."

But there was no secret that the "red tape" encountered from officials, the difficulty of selling the show to the fans and the fact that the game itself was no test—the American League all-stars won 9-0 —made it doubtful that the venture would be undertaken on the same pattern next year.

Alberta Airman, Feared Missing, Safe With Unit

CALGARY, July 9.—(CP)—Po Leonard Oscar Hilton Boucher, 20, was reported missing from air operations in Egypt Sunday, and yesterday his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Boucher of Calgary, received a wire from the Air Ministry stating their son was now safe with his unit and slightly injured. Details of the action were not revealed in the wire.

Nearly 200,000,000 money orders are issued annually by the U.S. post office department.

CHAPTER XII

JUDITH opened her eyes and stared dazedly about the hospital room. At the foot of the bed a doctor and nurse watched her anxiously. She had slept for 24 hours, a sleep of exhaustion encouraged by a sedative the doctor had given her.

She rose slowly to the surface of consciousness. Then suddenly all the events of the night on the boat came back to her.

"Let me out of here," she cried, and started to get out of bed. But the nurse stepped forward and firmly forced her back under the covers.

"You must be very careful," she insisted.

"You are a sick girl," put in the physician, bending over her attentively.

Judith pressed her lips together and pulled herself back against the pillows. She looked at the doctor defiantly.

"I want to know if I look like a crazy person?"

The doctor shook his head quickly and smiled at her. "Of course not, my dear, you're just a sick young lady."

All right then. Listen to me. Call up the Wilson Airplane factory and ask for Mr. Mathews and tell him to come after Miss Kingsly at once. Will you do that? Promise?"

He nodded. "I'll do it right away, Miss Kingsly. Now you rest and have some food. You haven't eaten in the last 24 hours, you know."

"That isn't the half of it. I haven't eaten in two days. You had better tell Mr. Mathews to bring me some clothes, too." She eyed him suspiciously. "You did promise to call!"

The nurse and doctor went out together.

"Are you really going to call, Doctor Martin?" the girl whispered.

"What harm can it do?" he challenged. "I told her I would and I don't like to lie. Besides, there might be some truth in her words. It's a clew to work on, you know. But I am afraid it is just a mental case."

Judith was given food and after she had finished her hair was combed and curled and tied up. One of the student nurses brought some powder and rouge. But there were no clothes for her, so she stayed in bed obediently.

She was beginning to think her message had not been delivered or that Mathews had deserted her when the door of her room was pushed open and in came the manager of the factory, weighed down with boxes and bundles, and followed by the doctor and nurse.

"Miss Kingsly!" he cried. "I've never been so glad to see a person in my life." He dropped the boxes on the floor and reached to kiss her cheek as if he were an old friend. "We've been crazy. Mr. Watson is flying out here—should be in here in a few hours now."

Judith smiled, her eyes glowing. But before she could speak, the doctor was saying apologetically:

"I'm so sorry about all this, Miss Kingsly."

She accepted the apology with a wave of her bandaged hand.

"Mr. Mathews—what happened to Tom? Did the detec—" Her eyes were cloudy with tears.

He smiled and nodded his head. "The detectives reached the boat right after you jumped overboard. There was some shooting but all the men were captured and Burke was unharmed. Even the ones at the house were caught. That's why the detective were a little slow in catching up with you."

"Then Tom is all right." Gladness rang in her voice and the tears spilled over her lashes. She wiped at them with the corner of the sheet.

"He will be in a little while," grinned the manager knowingly. "Just as soon as I get you out of here. I haven't told him yet about you. I have him out at my place. We'll go there immediately."

Two nurses came to help Judith dress in the lovely things Mathews had brought for her. The bandages were removed from her hands and Judith found that the scratches had healed nicely.

"I had no idea you were so lovely, Miss Kingsly," said one of the nurses, as she stood off to have a better look.

"Quite remarkable how a little fixing up helps," smiled Judith. "Think I'll do now?"

"If he doesn't say he loves you, something is wrong with his eyesight."

Mathews was waiting for her in the hall. He tucked her arm through his and led her away.

"I just called home and found out Burke is in the garden. I told them to keep him there. It's a pretty setting for the reunion of lovers."

Judith blushed but made no comment.

The car pulled into the driveway and Mathews pointed in the direction of the swimming pool.

"Follow the walk around there and you'll find him somewhere nearby."

Judith slipped from the car and hurried down the flagstones. She had never been so happy in her life. She rounded a shrub and ran smack into someone. She bounced back, breathless, as the man turned.

"Judy!"

For a moment, Tom Burke could not believe his eyes. He swiped a hand across them to clear his vision.

"Oh, Tom!" she cried and reached hands towards him. "I'm not a ghost!"

That was all she needed to say at the moment.

Much later Mathews came out to say that Watson was there and wanting to see them. Judith's eyes were bright with the happiness of love as she and Tom slowly followed him to the house.

"Miss Kingsly!"

Watson hurried across the room and took her into his arms. Judith, astonished by his sudden action was mute and wide-eyed. He kissed the top of her head.

"My dear girl—I have been frantic over your disappearance. I'm taking you back east with me—at once."

"Just a minute," put in Tom. "Miss Kingsly doesn't work for you any more."

"What do you mean?" Watson almost shouted the question; then he subsided and smiled. "I see," he said. "I suppose you are taking over the job of her future?"

Judith blushed as Tom's arm went around her waist and pulled her to his side.

"That's right, Mr. Watson," Burke answered. "Judith did a swell job for the company. She was responsible for rescuing me and capturing those spies. No man could have done better. But I never want her life put in danger again, and it isn't going to be," he added determinedly. "From now on she's going to lead a sheltered life."

There was a twinkle in his eyes as he kissed her.

Watson was beaming at them as he reached for Tom's hand; then he turned to Judith.

"I'll miss seeing that red head of yours every day, Miss Kingsly. But, frankly, I sent you out here because I hated to see you and Burke separated. I thought you two might patch things up if I threw you together." He sighed. "I had no idea I was letting you in for such an experience. I trumped up that excuse of a leak in the organization just to send you out here. It's a good thing I did."

"It's a good thing for both of us," said Tom.

Judith turned glowing eyes to the man she loved.

"And for me too," she smiled.

Mathews suddenly reasserted himself as host. "Well, seeing that the future is taken care of, suppose you two explore the garden again. I'll entertain Mr. Watson."

McKenney On Bridge

By WILLIAM E. McKENNEY

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Fain of San Antonio, Tex., traveled to Florida to win the Southeastern mixed pair championship in the sectional tournament at Coral Gables.

One of the problems I have seen this year was played by Fain (South). On the opening lead Fain's ace won East's jack of clubs. He saw two losers, one in clubs and one in diamonds. Apparently the only way to make the contract was to develop a squeeze. But for the successful operation of most forms of squeeze, the declarer has to be able to win all the tricks but one in top cards.

So Fain at once reduced the count to this situation by leading the jack of spades and ducking it. West won with the queen and led the second club forcing the king. Now the ace and king of trumps were cashed, followed by the ace of spades, on which Fain discarded a diamond. A third round of spades was ruffed to extract East's last spade. Then South led the rest of his trumps.

At the end West had to let go his diamond stopper to save the high spade. Dummy thereupon let go the spade and East was squeezed between diamonds and clubs.

was equal to the occasion at all times.

He stated that during ex-Chief Shutie's years of retirement he will still be known as "The Chief".

TOKEN OF FELLOWSHIP

When presenting the ring, Chief Blackwood stated that it was being presented as a token that will remind him, in years to come, of the good fellowship that he had enjoyed with the men of his force during his 31 years of service.

In response, ex-Chief Shute stated that this was an occasion when words failed him. He said that there were pleasant times and there were tough times but that the ring meant "the circle of friends" which he is pleased to have made during his many years with the force.

He quoted remarks by prominent army and civic officials in praising the force he is leaving behind and called it "the finest and most efficient law enforcement body anywhere in Canada."

"It is not an easy matter to sever association with such a fine body of men," he declared.

"It is their loyalty and devotion to duty that has made me whatever success I was as their chief constable," he added.

Furthermore, no force can be efficient without the support of the citizens, and the citizens of Edmonton have given that support," ex-Chief Shute stated.

SEES BIG FUTURE

In closing, he foresaw great things for the Edmonton force in view of the many predictions of Edmonton's potential growth very shortly.

He stated that the force was fortunate in having one of their own men promoted to chief. That is as it should be, he stated.

He had high praise for the incoming chief and expressed the hope that the force will continue its gave its support to him as it had done during his term of office.

"He is a fine, upright, clean man, who has always given of his best," she retired chief declared.

In proposing a welcome to the new chief, Detective Inspector John Leslie stated that he concurred in all that the ex-chief had said about Chief Blackwood.

The new chief fittingly replied by expressing the hope that he would receive the same type of loyalty from the force that the retired chief had enjoyed over the many years.

VETERANS PRESENT

Three veterans of the force who had retired on pension during the past few years were introduced to the members. These were ex-Sergeant A. E. "Dad" Miller, ex-Sergeant Ed Watson and ex-Constable Lawrence Hunter.

Each one replied fittingly to the honor bestowed upon them.

Detective James Peterson spoke on behalf of the Edmonton Police Association and expressed appreciation for the courtesy that retired Chief Shute had extended to the association during many years.

"He has done much on our behalf on numerous occasions," Detective Peterson stated, "and I am confident that the new chief will continue to extend the same kind of courtesy."

Chief Blackwood is president of the Police Amateur Athletic Club that sponsored the banquet and Detective Inspector John Leslie is secretary-treasurer.

Britons, Yanks, Canadians Join In Gruelling Ulster Battle Drill

WITH THE ALLIED FORCES IN NORTHERN IRELAND, July 9.—(AP)—British, United States and Canadian troops in Northern Ireland completed today eight gruelling days of battle practice, the first in which the great Allied forces in Ulster have joined.

(It was understood in London that the Canadians at the manoeuvres were confined to a small liaison group.)

British soldiers who have been in the field for almost three years and Americans with about 18 months training in the United States and Ulster "fought" together and against each other in the first such manoeuvres in the European theatre of operations.

An attack by United States armored formations halted the big push of the opposing force.

Maj.-Gen. Russel Hartle, commander of United States forces in Northern Ireland, directed all the British troops which opposed joint British-United States forces headed by Maj.-Gen. V. H. B. Majendie, chief of the northern defence zone.

As a climax of the battle practice United States armored formations joined Gen. Hartle's force and wound up the "fight" with a roaring tank attack witnessed by senior British and Polish military leaders.

Getting Around

international sense there are still instances of minority isolationism within nations.

People in minority groups still attempt to isolate themselves within a single nation in spite of the great tidal wave of technical advance that is shouting from the mountain tops that a nation can march in one direction only in this day and age.

And that part of a nation that stubbornly and anxiously clings to the culture and ways of yesterday will be engulfed in the one-way tide.

Recently we heard a man predict that sectionalism and racial prejudice would be swept away forever in the near future by a new form of education. Said this gentleman:

"To attack the religious beliefs of a minority is both dangerous and futile and will never solve the problem.

"At the bottom of most problems of sectionalism is ignorance of what people in other parts of the country are really like. The schools of the entire nation must do their part in the enlightened tomorrow will be greatly different from that of the present.

"Children will spend a period of three or four years of their school years just visiting every part of their own country, getting to know the children of other sections and getting to know geography at first hand.

"They will be under the supervision of highly-trained specialists, who will make certain they see only the best of every section of national life in all parts of the nation visited. Do you think that sectionalism could flourish under such a system?"

Wonder if he's got something there?
